IN PARIS on Saturday the French minister of fine arts and many distinguished private individuals and public officials attended the unveiling of a statue to Sarah Bernhardt in the Place Malesherbes.

The great actress is shown in the role of Phedre, as she appeared, long ago, at the Theatre Francais.

The French honor themselves in erecting this statue to a really great genius among women. And they honor the Jewish race, which produced Bernhardt.

When will men honor the greatest of women, those that create the men that do the world's work? Do you know of any statue to Nancy Hanks? Lincoln is to her what Saint Peter's in Rome is to Michelangelo.

NEW YORK witnessed a religious ceremonial yesterday, such as had not been seen, outside of Italy or Spain, for a century.

A great procession of Catholic dignitaries proceeded up Fifth avenue to St. Patrick's Cathedral, where Cardinal Bonzano, sent by the Pope to Chicago's Eucharistic Congress, was solemnly welcomed.

THERE WERE nine cardinals leading the procession of churchmen, eight of them from foreign countries. Ten archbishops, thirty bishops, dozens of monsignori, priests and lesser SEEK ENDOWMENT OF 75 MILLION FOR B. U.

An endowment of $75,000,000 by 1944 is the aim of Boston University that was announced today by President Daniel L. Marsh at the fifty-third annual commencement exercises of the university in Symphony Hall. The university has endowments totalling $7,000,000.

This means the addition of $68,000,000 in the next eighteen years, at the end of which time Boston University will have reached its seventy-fifth birthday, Dr. Marsh said, explaining that the first step will be to get $164,000 this month to wind up the campaign for $1,500,000 for the College of Liberal Arts.

COMES AS SURPRISE.

Announcement of the 18-year campaign was a distinct surprise and was received with rounds of applause from the 995 graduating students, faculty members and others who filled Symphony Hall to overflowing.

President Lowell of Harvard, chief speaker at the commencement, declared that American schools are too slow, with children doing work in primary, grammar and high schools that should be done much earlier, and entering college several years behind foreign students.

"Formal eductation is a fetish in America," Said President Lowell. "The end should be the development to the highest possible extent of the student himself. Children in school, or young people in college, are not objects to be turned out all of one pattern like Waltham watches or Ford cars.

HONORARY DEGREES GIVEN.

"In college, the exaggerated interest in athletics has been due not so much to their peculiar fascination for young men as to the lack of serious interest in academic work, a failing which colleges are trying to remedy in various ways."

Among the 995 graduates were 566 men and 429 women. Presentation of diplomas was interrupted by the

BOMB-HURLER HELD IN $2500

Frank Castagno, 45, of No. 43 McKinley street, Revere, arraigned in the Chelsea District Court today for manslaughter, charged with having hurled a fireworks bomb that caused the death of 13-year-old Samuel Moschella of Revere, was held until June 21 in bonds of $2,500.

Castagno was saved from an angry mob by police after causing the death of the youth in a parade at Revere yesterday. The man claimed he did not know the fireworks would bring fatal sesults, and that the act was done as a prank.

YOUTH'S TIP LEADS TO BIG SEIZURE OF BOOZE BY POLICE NEAR SALEM

Between 500 and 600 cases of Grade A rum, valued at several thousand dollars, were seized, and five men arrested early today by police of three North Shore cities who descended upon the scene as the liquor was being ferried ashore on the Danvers side of the river near Salem from a large powerboat anchored in midstream. The powerboat, 75 feet in length, got away.

A Salem patrolman, a Danvers patrolman, and a Beverly patrolman joined forces and went to the scene of the seizure in the wee hours. From the anchored powerboat a skiff was making trips to the shore with laudable regularity, leaving a number of cases there

CARDINAL STARTS ON HIS WAY TO CHICAGO

Cardinal O'Connell left early this morning on the first leg of his journey by automobile to Buffalo, where he will join the official Boston party to the International Eucharistic Congress, to be held at Chicago June 20 to 24, inclusive, on Thursday evening.

The first stop the head of the Boston archdiocese will make will be at the Jesuit novitiate of St. Stanislaus at Stockbridge this evening. The novitiate was formerly the estate of Andrew Carnegie, known as "Shadow Lawn," one of the finest in the Berkshires. Some time ago the Cardinal promised the Rev. Harding Fisher, S. J., superior at the Jesuit house there, that he would go there and spend a day or two with them.

He anticipates great pleasure in meeting his colleagues of the Sacred College who have come to this country for the Congress, many of them from long distances. Cardinal Piffl of Vienna and Cardinal Czernoch, the primate of Hungary, are old friends of his. He will be very glad also to meet the primate of Ireland, Cardinal O'Donnell, whom he has not seen since he was elevated to the Sacred College some time ago.

When I asked him the other day what his plans for the Congress were, he declared that for his part

O'CONNELL, M'CARTHY PLEAD NOT GUILTY

Francis J. O'Connell, teller, and John J. McCarthy, cashier, in the Boston city collector's office, arrested following a check-up of shortages in that department, were arraigned today in Municipal Court on three charges, pleaded not guilty and were held in $5,000 bail each for continuance Friday.

Each is charged with larceny, conspiracy to commit larceny and making false entries on the account books of the city.

Attorney Timothy J. Driscoll appeared for McCarthy and William C. Hennessey for O'Connell.

The itemized list of shortages revealed today shows an increase of more than $100 over the amount stated in the complaint. The shortages are listed as follows: April 1, 1924, $2,500; October 1, 1924, $1,500 and $800; September 1, 1925, $1,000; January 1, 1926, $928; total, $6,728. The amount given in the complaint was $6,569.47.

False entries were made on the following dates, it is charged: March 25, 27, 29 and 30, and April 1, 2, 3 and May 28 of this year.

EX-BRAVE STAR HEADS AGGIE

Amherst, June 14 (A.P.).—Edward Morgan Lewis, dean and acting president of Massachusetts Agricultural College, today was elected president of the college. He succeeded Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield, who resigned two years ago to become head of Michigan Agricultural College.

President Lewis, a graduate of Williams College in 1896, formerly was widely known as a baseball player. He was one of the star pitchers of the old Boston Nationals. He has been dean since 1914.

The trustees elected Willard I. Munson, director of the division of markets of the State Department of Agriculture, as director of the extension service, succeeding John D. Willard. Robert D. Hawley, supervisor of correspondence courses, was chosen secretary, succeeding Ralph J. Watts.

WHITE LIGHTS TURN DIM FOR THEM
"Don't do it again," admonished Police Lieutenant James Kiernan at the Liberty avenue station, New York, to Ruth Moran, 16, of No. 87 Silver street, and Gertrude Arnold, 15, of No. 9 Rose street, both South Boston, after they had been found by police with only 16 cents left. They ran away to go on the stage, but Broadway failed to give them a chance. After being hunted for a fortnight, they are willing to come home and "not do it any more."

13 ARMY HORSES KILLED IN CAR

Watertown, N. Y., June 14 (I.N.S.).—Thirteen valuable horses are dead from suffocation and several others are dying following their ten-hour stay in a sealed freight car while being transferred with members of Troop F, 101st Cavalry, National Guard, New York, from Rochester to camp, 14 miles from here.

According to military authorities investigating the case, 32 horses were packed into a car built for 24 and the doors and windows were sealed.

Members of the troop alighting from the train while it was stopped at Phelps Mills, about 10 miles from here, discovered the condition of the horses.

'COMEAU GRABBED GUN AND WAS SLAIN,' SAYS TOOTHAKER ON GRILL

Gripping hard the rail of the witness stand, Stanley B. Toothaker, one of three alleged slayers of Policeman Frank J. Comeau in Dorchester, testified in defense of his own life today at the trial in Superior Court.

Characterized by two witnesses just preceding—two alienists appointed by the State—as a youth with the mentality of but twelve years, young Toothaker, during his stay on the stand, kept his eyes glued on the face of his mother, sitting a few feet before him.

Although her eyes were red and her face swollen, apparently from much weeping, Mrs. Toothaker was composed as she watched her boy carefully, seemingly giving him courage.

Elsewhere in the crowded courtroom, however, there was not so much composure. The mother and sister of John Robert Sambursky, codefendant with Toothaker and Albert DeShone, wept softly all during Toothaker's testimony, and a number of other women—strangers—scattered throughout the throng in the room, wept also in the spirit of the situation.

Briefly, in answer to questions by Bernard J. Killion, his counsel, Toothaker sketched the events of the night when Comeau was slain in Dickens street, Dorchester, but before that told something of his early life and his comparatively short schooling.

His answers, in a low, respectful tone, brought frequent admonitions from the court for louder response.

Toothaker declared that following his arrest in Lynn, he was questioned almost continually until Tuesday, with little chance for sleep.

CHILD DROWNS BY PUSH FROM PLAYFUL COLLIE

Pushed into the Charles River by a collie dog which leaped playfully at him, Arthur Langdale, four, of No. 993 Chestnut street, Newton Upper Falls, was drowned today at the Sluiceway Dam near Boylston and Ellis streets. A playmate, Dorothy Copeland, four, of No. 999 Chestnut street, witnessed the fatality.

Ernest Eyles of West Fitchburg, who is visiting his father-in-law, J. W. Smith of the Metropolitan Police, at No. 39 Ellis street, recovered the body from the water. Police and fire departments were summoned and two physicians worked over the body for two hours before pronouncing the child dead.

UNION LABOR
BEWARE!

New England is flooded with cigars now being made in New York and Pennsylvania by non-union labor for some of the big Boston cigar manufacturers.

This does not apply to the Elcho Cigar Co., which is standing by us and does not have cigars made outside of Boston.

Union labor must stand by its friends. Not only should we buy Elcho cigars because of the consistent stand of the Elcho Cigar Co. for union principles, but because of its insistence in employing local labor all the time.

Respectfully yours,
James T. Moriarty

In probably the most remarkable church procession in the history of the "new world," the Knights of Columbus and dozens of high churchmen passed down Fifth avenue, New York. Thousands of persons lined the route and nine Cardinals in vestments took part.

TOOTHAKER LAYS COMEAU'S DEATH SHOT TO DESHONE

that lasted two hours and twenty minutes, young Toothaker, however, did not swerve from a declaration that he did not know what he was saying when he made some of his "confession" statements in Lynn.

He had been under steady questioning, not only for hours, but for days, he said, and was weak and faint.

WORE GLOVES ONCE.

The boy testified that on burglary jobs of the trio, he had the task of lookout. He used to sit in the front rooms, he said, and watch for the return of occupants of the house.

At the Johnston road, Mattapan, burglary, Tootaker testified, he and his companions wore leather gloves, that they might not leave finger prints.

Coming to the death scene, he said he was seated in the rear of the machine, from which the rear seat had been removed, when it stalled in Dickens street, across from the police wagon house.

Samburaky spoke to Comeau first when he emerged from the wagon house, Toothaker said, then DeShone added his voice.

"I did not hear clearly what was said," declared Toothaker. "Then the man took out his gun and said, 'Step over here.'"

"DESHON WRESTLED HIM."

Q.—Did you know at that time that he was an officer? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Where did he take the gun from? A.—The gun was in his hip pocket and he motioned for us to go over after he had taken the gun out. Then DeShon and Sambursky took out their guns and told the man to kindly step into the alley.

"I was on the running board at the time," Toothaker said. "I was just getting out of the car. Then I noticed that DeShon and the officer did a little wrestling, and while they were wrestling the officer grabbed DeShon's gun and when he grabbed it the gun went off.

"I was about fifteen feet away at the time and just before the gun went off Sambursky stepped back toward me. Then the other two fellows started to run and I got off the running board and stopped in the middle of the road. I was in a kind of a daze."

Q.—Did you have a gun that night? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Have you ever fired a pistol or gun in your life? A.—No.

Toothaker said that he did not know Comeau had placed them under arrest that night, until he read it the following day in the newspapers. He declared he did not know DeShon and Sambursky were carrying pistols.

Under cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Timothy F. Callahan, the boy said he never had attended Sunday School, but admitted he knew the difference between right and wrong.

Preceding young Toothaker on the stand in today's session as defense witnesses were Dr. Winfred Oberholtser of No. 11 Beacon street, specialist in mental diseases, and Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, noted psychiatrist, both of whom said that they had been appointed by the State, under statute, to examine Toothaker.

TERM HIM "DULL."

Dr. Oberholtser testified that he examined the boy on four occasions and classed him as a "dull normal," with a mental age of approximately twelve or thirteen years. Toothaker is nineteen.

The boy, Dr. Oberholtser testified, is not insane or defective metally, but his judgment is not that of a normal boy of his age; he has ability to decide between right and wrong, has the mentality to entertain malice and the capacity to premeditate.

Dr. Briggs also testified that young Toothaker's mental development is that of a boy only twelve years old.

New Joan of Arc

GIRL EVANGELIST

GIRL, 14, HOPES TOCONVERT N.Y.

New York, June 14 (A.P.).—A 14-year-old girl with an ambition to convert all New York to what she terms "old fashioned religion" has begun her campaign from the pulpit of Calvary Baptist Church.

Uldine Mabelle Utley, born in Oklahoma in 1912, who until two years ago occupied herself with dreams of motion picture stardom, yesterday delivered a two-hour plea for converts to Christianity from the pulpit usually filled by Dr. John Roach Straton, one of the most famous divines of the county.

At the end of her sermon men and women prayed in the aisles of the church, and the few who failed to arise at the young woman's plea were exhorted again and again until only about six remained seated.

Dr. Straton introduced thegirl as "The Joan of Arc of the modern religious world." and announced plans for a city wide revival campaign she is to conduct in the Fall.

Miss Utley, whose father and mother travel with her on her religious campaigns, began her career two years ago as an evangelist in California, where she was converted.

COP STOPS RUNAWAY AFTER CHILD IS HIT

Hurling himself at a pair of runaway horses in Endicott street, North End, Patrolman James Keiran, past sixty, clung to the bridle today and was dragged sixty feet. He halted the team after the heavy wagon had struck a child and smashed a police box at Thatcher and Endicott streets. The child, unidentified, was carried into a nearby house.

The team, owned by the Boston Ice Company, was standing in front of No. 163 Endicott street, when it became frightened. Although the wheels of the wagon were chained, the scared animals turned it completely around and dragged it through the street. Patrolman Keiran suffered lacerations on both knees.

DESTROYER GROUNDS IN NARRAGANSETT BAY

Newport, R. I., June 14, A.P.)—The destroyer Toucey of the naval scouting fleet was anchored in Narragansett Bay today awaiting the lifting of a fog having been floated from a shore where she had grounded. The Toucey ran aground late last night while proceeding slowly in a dense fog off Castle Hill. Her commander reported by radio that practically no damage had been done the ship and no one had been injured.

Woman Loses $375 by Old-Time Flim-Flam

Approaching Dorothy Simhouse of Tremont street, South End, as sheh was leaving a ban where she had withdrawn $375, two men worked a flim-flam which relieved the woman of her savings and left her with a bag containing only a wad of newspaper.

The men first inquired if she had lost a bag which they claimed to have found, containing over $400, and then offered to divide the money with her. They persuaded her to place her own money in the bag and carry it to her home, where they would meet and split.

Arriving home Miss Simhouse discovered that her roll had disappeared.

each time. Between 500 and 600 cases had been landed and were only awaiting to be taken away by motor when the raiders arrived.

No shots were fired and the five men at the landing spot surrendered without a fight. They gave their names as William Curtin, No. 15 Cliff street, Salem; Anthony Darman, No. 94 Derby street, Salem; George Condon, No. 39 Dustin street Peabody; William Welsh, No. 46 Endicott street, Salem, and Raymond Dallon of Danvers. The men were locked up and the liquor safely stored under lock and key. An effort is being made to trace the power boat.

A youth who had seen the powerboat make several trips to different points along the river at various times telephoned the Beverly police.

DROUGHT BROKEN AFTER MASS PRAYERS FOR RAIN

Charlotte, N. C., June 14. (A.P.).—Rain, in several instances coming after mass prayer meetings, today gave hope to many in South Carolina and North Carolina, who had respaired in the face of the long drought that gripped the two states.

Gastonia, N. C., had the first rain in many days. Prayers were said in churches with the hope of rain.

Citizens of Chester, S. C., ordered their places of business closed today at 11 A. M. to gather in prayer. At Rockhill, S. C., a 15-minute shower followed 65 dry days. Prayer had been offered for four days. A downpour drenched Charlotte last night the fall continuing for more than three hours.

he intends to keep as much as possible out of the turmoil. Fortunately, the Boston pilgrimage will live on the South American during the Congress, which gives the 500 people in it excellent opportunity for seclusion whenever they feel the need of it.

Cardenal Mundelein requested Cardinal O'Connell to stop with him during the Congress, and a suite of rooms also was put at his disposal in Chicago, but he refused both, because he knows that the general excitement will be very trying, unavoidably so, and he intends to escape as much of it as he possibly can, compatible with his part in the services which are assigned to him.

Portugueses Archbishop Brings Message to Catholics

New York, June 14 (A.P.).—High dignitaries of the Roman Catholic Church continued to arrive in New York today on their journey from distant lands to attend the Eucharistic Congress in Chicago.

Among those arriving on the Royal Mail liner Orca today were H's Grace Don Manuel Vieira de Mattos, archbishop of Braga, Portugal. His grace, known as the primate of the Spains and chief shepherd of more than 5,000,000 Portuguese Catholics, arrived unheralded, but was later welcomed by Camilo Camara, Portuguese Vice-Consul at New York.

The Portuguese archbishop will leave for Chicago on Wednesday. He brought a message to Portuguese Americans and other Catholics of the country which told them that Catholicism was more strongly entrenched and making more progress in Portugal at present than ever before. His grace said that the younger generation of Portugal was very ardent in the practice of Catholicism.

RIFLE TOWER GUARDS $200,000 ALKY STILL

San Francisco, June 14 (A.P.).—Federal prohibition agents today are seeking the owner of a $200,000 alcohol distillery discovered in a densely wooded canyon at Point Reyes, north of here and protected by a 50-foot watch tower housing an automatic rifle nest.

R. Lucchesi, owner of a nearby trout farm, was arrested and held for questioning. Officers believe the still has been in operation for three years and has produced alcohol for $2,000,000 worth of synthetic gin.

Honor Impugned

Count Karolyi, called out in duel. Count Teleki, who wants to fight.

COUNT KAROLYI FACES DUEL

Budapest, June 14 (I.N.S.).—Count Karolyi has been challenged to a duel by Count Teleki.

Count Teleki charges his honor has been impugned by Count Karolyi in statements which he made during the recent franc forgery case. Details of the duel are kept a secret.

Count Karolyi is well-known in the United States, where he had difficulties with the State Department in securing admission to visit his ill wife and was only granted permission to enter after he promised to make no speeches or statements. After leaving the United States he made several utterances denouncing the United States Government. Countess Karolyi has also been barred from entering the United States and has been fighting the case in the courts.

WORCESTER BOY ENDS LIFE BY MONOXIDE GAS

Worcester, June 14.—Charles W. Moir, twenty-two and socially prominent in Worcester, committed suicide by inhaling monoxide gas at his Shrewsbury home. According to the youth's moher, he went to the garage for his car but did not return. She called he police who broke through the door of the garage and found the body on tre floor. Medical Examiner Baker pronounced death due to suicide. Moir was the son of the late Alexander J. Moir, who committed suicide by shooting himself five years ago.

Ford Honored for "Changing the World"

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 14 (A.P.).—Henry Ford today was awarded the degree of doctor engineering by the University of Michigan. The degree, the only one ever accepted by the Detroit industrialist, was "in recognition of his material contribution to social welfare and his constructive imagination in the field of industry."

The citation described Mr. Ford as a man "whose genius brought into being an industry that changed the world."

IN GARY BLAST

Gary, Ind., June 14 (A.P.).—Five men were killed, four of them instantly, by an explosion, believed to be due to gas, in a coke oven of the by-products plant of the Illinois Steel Company here today.

Seventy-five others were injured, a dozen of them seriously, when the two-story brick building was wrecked.

The explosion started a fire in nearby buildings of the plant and all available apparatus at Gary, nearby towns and manufacturing plants were summoned, as well as all available ambulances and doctors. The fire was not serious.

HUBBY STAYS HOME

Mrs. Russell Codman, Jr., of Boston, as she sailed for Europe on her honeymoon. Young Codman saw his bride of a few weeks sail away while Boston business held him here. She was Miss Elinor Patterson of Chicago, the nun in "The Miracle." Codman will join her abroad.

ROMANCE WAS BLOSSOMED IN ALCOHOL

John J. Gorman, South Boston war veteran, was so drunk when he was married that he couldn't swear to anything about the ceremony, he testified today in Suffolk Court before Chief Justice Hall. Gorman was awarded a divorce from Veronica Gorman of South Boston on the grounds of desertion.

He met his bride only twice in a month before they were married and his knowledge of the ceremony was hazy, he said. Cross-examined closely by the court, he admitted she did say something to him about marriage on one occasion. She was 54 and a widow, while he was 27. They were married in 1920. When he returned from a visit to his father, he said, she refused to have anything mor to do with him.

The suit was uncontested.

Mary A. Conley of Milton won a divorce from Fred W. Conley on the grounds of desertion. They were married in 1919. Her husband, she said, thought she was marrying into money, and when he found out this was not true, he left her.

The marriage of Lillian V. Everett, Boston, to Jacob T. Everett was annulled. She was 17 when they were married. Three weeks after the ceremony, she testified, she found letters from another woman in her husband's pockets. He finally admitted that he was previously married, she said.

VLORA'S DECREE DATED JUNE 2

Paris, June 14 (I.N.S.).—Princess Vlora, the former Mrs. Frank Gould, was divorced from her fourth husband, Oscar M. Burke, on June 2, as exclusively announced by the International News Service, the Seine Tribunal announced today.

PrincessVlora received her divorce on the grounds that Burke, whom she married in New York January 8, 1926, refused to resume marital relations. Evidence was introduced that Burke had refused to go to Paris, where the Princess maintains her residence, stating that he "did not want to go to Paris, where he was bored."

Princess Vlora was formerly Helen Kelly. She married Frank J. Gould and divorced him. Then she married Ralph Thomas, who died. Next she married Prince Vlora, a claimant to the Albian throne, but divorced him and last Winter married Burke.

REVERE ELKS TO HOLD FLAG EXERCISES TONIGHT

L. F. McNamara, Haverhill attorney, will address the Revere Lodge of Elks at the observance of their annual Flag Day to be held tonight at the lodge headquarters. Entertainment will be furnished by a Revere high school orchestra, headed by Helen N. O'Connor; Grace Chadwick in songs, Rita Mary McGrath in recitations and John J. Cronin, Jr., in a short tribute to the flag. The exercises are open to the public.

COMING HOME TO REJOIN HUSBAND

ELSIE BARTLETT

Former Somerville actress, on her way back from Europe, to take up home home life with her husband, Joseph Schildkraut, "world's handsomest actor." Separated four times when she charged he was cruel, they are shown here in one of her relenting moments.

'BROKEN HEART' KILLED HARRIS

Brockton, June 14.—He died of a broken heart.

This was the reason assigned today by his many friends for the death of Judge Robert O. Harris, former United States attorney for Massachusetts.

Since his removal from office by President Coolidge after he refused to tender his resignation, the judge had failed noticeably and his end was predicted many months ago. He was 71 years old.

It was recalled today that after his dismissal he said: "It is a pretty tough thing to have the knowledge go down to posterity that I was fired out of office by the President of the United States without a chance to tell my side of the case."

His funeral will be held from the home on Newbury street tomorrow with the Rev. Warren Goddard, pastor of the New Church of Elmwood (East Bridgewater), officiating.

Mackerel Price Lower

A record catch of fresh mackerel was received at the fish pier today when 781,000 pounds was landed, forcing the price down to 4½ to 5 cents a pound. The schooner Lincoln headed the list with with 75,000 pounds. Most of the catches were made off NovaS Scotia.

ROB AUTOISTS ON INSURANCE

Wareham, June 14.—Two Providence men probably will face court here on charges of having obtained money under false pretenses from numerous automobile owners in Cape towns.

Their arrest has bared what State officials believe to be a wholesale fraud scheme which has been in operation about a month. The men, arrested by State police Patrolman Edmund V. Downey as suspects, gave their names as John Hawkins, twenty-four, Biltmore Hotel, and Irving McGinty, thirty, Atlantic avenue, Providence.

It is charged by the State police that the men represented themselves as agents for an automobile association, with offices in Boston and Washington, and told automobile owners that the State compulsory automobile insurance was in effect, and that owners of uninsured machines rendered themselves liable to arrest if they allowed them on the the highways.

Get Cheaper Gas Rate

Under a contract approved today by the Public Utilities Commission, the Boston Consolidated Company for the next year will buy gas from the New England Fuel and Transportation Company at the rate of 35 cents a thousand cubic feet. The old rate was 37½ cents.

337 TUFTS MEN GIVEN DEGREES

Governor Fuller and Jane Addams Among Those Who Get Honorary Titles

Three hundred and thirty-seven degrees, eleven of them honorary, were conferred today at the seventieth commencement of Tufts College. Governor Alvan T. Fuller received the degree of Doctor of Laws, and Jane Addams of Chicago received the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters

The exercises were held in the college auditorium. Undergraduate orations were delivered by the highest ranking seniors in each of the departments of the college. The degrees were conferred by President John A. Cousens.

HONORS AWARDED.

GOVERNOR'S ADDRESS.

Governor Fuller delivered an address in which he urged college heads to withstand the encroachments of materialism so that American youths may go into the world armed with religious convictions and Christian ideals.

People will never be made good by laws, but rather by the quickening of the public conscience, idealism and Christian faith, he declared, sharply criticizing excesses in lawmaking in Congress and the State Legislatures.

"A preposterous snarl over our free-born citizenship," the Governor termed the existing multiplicity of laws. He cited the cost to taxpayers as nearly $1,000 per law, without figuring the expense of enforcement, and said that nearly 100,000 persons are engaged in making, printing and otherwise getting the laws on the statute books before enforcement begins.

The following honors, all cum laude, were awarded to Greater Boston students in the medical school: Romeo Armand Bernard, Susannah Friedman, Dorchester; Louis Keller, Dorchester; Guy Charles Pesce, Boston. In the dental school, Gustave Albert Aldrin, Roxbury; Saul Biller, Somerville; Thomas Francis Cody, Boston, and James Krivitskey, Boston, were awarded cum laude degrees.

HONORARY DEGREES.

Honorary degrees were presented after the undergraduate degrees had been conferred. Besides the Doctor of Laws degree to Governor Fuller, the following honorary degrees were presented: Arial Wellington George, Doctor of Science; Dr. John Ridlon, Doctor of Science; Arthur Lynn Andrews, dean of the University of Hawaii, Jane Addams and Louise de Koven Bowen, Doctor of Humane Letters; George Inness, Jr., James Morgan, Claude Gernade Bowers, Master of Arts, and William John Taylor, Doctor of Divinity.

The senior prom, the final class function, will be held tonight in Goddard Gymnasium.

'LIAR,' 'BIFF'--THAT'S WAY TARIFF RULES ARE MADE

Washington, June 14 (A.P.).—The clashes within the tariff commission were not always verbal only, it was shown in testimony today by Commissioner Glassie, appearing before the Senate tariff investigating committee.

He said Commissioner, now Minister to Rumania, referred to a motion by Glassie as a smokes creen, whereby Glassie called Culbertson a liar and Culbertson hit Glassie in the eye with a tobacco pouch flung across the table.

Then Glassie removed his eye glasses and started around the table after Culbertson, but other members separated them.

MILK BRIBERY WITNESS SAYS SHE SAW MONEY PASS

New York, June 14 (A.P.).—Testifying today at the trial of Thomas J. Clougher, former secretary to the health commissioner, Miss Helen Sprey named three instances when her employer, Harry Danziger, gave money to Clougher.

Danziger has admitted receiving more than $100,000 as bribery to admit the illegal entrance of the products of Western Creameries to New York and named Clougher as recipient of 90 er cent, of the bootleg milk graft money.

HEIRESS ON 'COUNT'S' TRAIL

Wiseman, Alias Monte, Proposed, She Said; Kept Mum About Winthrop Daughter

"Count" Paul Anatole Monte, who isn't a count at all, but just plain Nicholas Wiseman, according to the Winthrop police, may fight extradition from New York all he desires to—but he'll be brought back to Winthrop just the same.

Lieutenant James H. Douglas of the Winthrop police was authority today for the statement that Monte is not a count and that he will be brought back to face charges of deserting his wife and five-year-old daughter in Winthrop.

Mrs. Nicholas Wiseman, according to the lieutenant, does not claim to be a countess by marriage or otherwise.

Monte is in a New York cell following his arrest on the desertion charge while attending a theatre with Miss Vera Branderburg, daughter of a Staten Island (N. Y.) and Newport (R. I.) millionaire.

Lieutenant Douglas, who said he would apply for extradition papers at the State House today and present them to Governor Smith of New York on Wednesday, declared that Vera and her mother were in Winthrop not so long ago, checking up on Monte.

They were decidedly shocked, according to the Lieutenant, when they found he had a wife and child for they said Monte had proposed to Vera as a bachelor.

16 AUTO DEATHS TOLL OF WEEK

Warm weather saw an increase in fatalities caused by automobiles. The week's report shows 16 killed, including nine children and seven adults. This was three more than the week preceding, but one less than the corresponding week a year ago.

Suspension of licenses and convictions for operating under the influence of liquor took a decided jump, the former climbing from 400 to 428, and the latter increasing 17 to 127. The suspensions registered 132 more than the same period one year ago.

41 GRADUATED AT CLARK UNIVERSITY

Worcester, June 14 (A.P.).—Clark University graduated a class of forty-one students, with the degree of A. B., twenty-two with the degree of A. M. and six with the degree of Ph. D. at the annual commencement exercises today.

Professor Thomas N. Carver of Harvard University was the commencement orator.

"Freckles" Barry's Girl Is Pretty and She's a Cook

Newark, N. J., June 14 (I.N.S.)—Fellows with freckles are always lucky. Wesley "Freckles" Barry of movie fame will marry Julia Wood today.

Julia is not only pretty and dainty, but—

"She is a great little cook," Barry declared today, smiling with every freckle.

"I am going to take care of Wes, that's all," the Bride said. "I am going to keep house for him."

GIRL WRITES DEATH NOTE AND ENDS LIFE

New York, June 14 (I.N.S.).—An unidentified girl, about 20, nervously paced a B. M. T. station in Brooklyn today.

She stopped, wrote a note and put it in her handbag.

Then, when the train came thundering along, she jumped to the tracks and was killed.

The not read:

"I am going to kill myself."

It was signed "Vic."

EVANGELIST IS SOUGHT HERE

Search for a mysterious woman, believed to be Aimee Semple McPherson, missing Los Angeles evangelist, was made today in the Inman square district of Cambridge.

Leaving a Pearl street, Cambridge, lodging house, the woman told the landlady, Mrs Annie P. Markham, that she was moving to her brother's house near Inman square.

The woman's story of her career convinced Mrs. Markham and her housekeeper, Mrs. Mary Pollock, that she was the missing woman preacher. The authorities were notified while she was out looking for another place to live.

When she returned for her clothing and other belongings, according to Mrs. Markham, she denied being Mrs. McPherson, but said she knew her, adding that she was present when the woman pastor's disappearance was first announced in the California temple where she preached.

The woman also told of knowing Cambridge families who knew Mrs. McPherson, Mrs. Markham said.

The housekeeper's curiosity was first aroused by the lodger's story of having formerly lived in Cambridge, having been a member of the Central Square Baptist Church, having preached in Tremont Temple and worked her way to the Pacific Coast.

The woman gave her name as Miss Nason. A reward of $25,000 has been offered for information leading to the discovery of Miss McPherson, who rose from a circuit evangelist to become the head of a $1,000,000 temple.

lights of the Roman Catholic Church were included in the march to the cathedral, made solemn and impressive by incense abundantly used along the route.

THE PROCESSION encircled St. Patrick's Cathedral, then entered the building, where a throne had been erected for the Pope's special envoy. A similar throne awaits Cardinal Bonzano in Chicago.

Other organizations, religious and others, rise and fall. Many have appeared and disappeared during the long centuries of Christendom. But the Roman Catholic Church goes on its way, stronger today in this new country than in any country of Europe. There is no more ably managed organization.

SIR OLIVER LODGE, a great scientist, says men should retire early—from hard work—and live longer. He retired at about seventy, and calls that "early." It is early for men that have lived sanely.

The aged scientist has actually not retired at all. He works daily in his laboratory and continues his study of the mysterious "imponderable ether," absolutely necessary to science as we understand it, necessary to the working of gravitation, yet never proved to be more than a working hypothesis.

Lodge is criticized by the thoughtless for his excursions into the realm of Spiritualism. But that often happens to men as they get old, and one that has contributed great things to real science has a right to play with foolish ideas for a rest.

Darwin read fairy stories in the evening, and even the great Newton wrote such stuff concerning the Apocalypse as makes you feel sorry for him.

Kepler pretended to tell the Emperor's fortune by the stars and Tycho Brahe listened reverently to the mouthings of a poor idiot that lay at his feet, at table, taking scraps of food from his hand.

"Kein berg ohne thal," says the German proverb. "No mountain without a valley." No great intellect without its shallow spots.

THE bootleg-after-the-war crime wave teaches that cowardice is more dangerous than courage in a bandit.

On two occasions recently timid bandits, their nerve failing at the critical moment, have shot wildly, killing several aimlessly, and leaving without the money they hoped to get.

Bold criminals, well armed, of the old train robber type, went about their business coldly and rarely committed murder.

THE MODERN NERVOUS, undersized criminal, fed on bootleg whiskey and drugs, does his work in terror and kills in fear like a biting rat.

That fear might be used to prevent crime if justice were swift, severe and remorseless. But "good behavior" cuts more than half from the convict's term. And in Chicago, prison officials are convicted of selling especial favors to criminals.

BRITISH THEOSOPHISTS, by a vote of 500 to 3, accept the young Hindu Krishnamurti as "World Teacher." It will be interesting to learn just what the young man has to teach.

When you come down from India's mountains to modern science, skyscrapers and big cities, you must offer some better cure for the World's troubles than "Abrakadabra" or any other mystic words.

THE STATEMENT that Krishnamurti presents himself as "Messiah," new or old, must be corrected. Mrs. Annie Besant, head of all Theosophists, wrote to this column from India, indignantly disclaiming any Messiahship for her young protege.

It would take a real Messiah to hold his own against modern miracles, of wireless, radio, etc. And public schools have made the job of a miracle worker harder than it used to be.

IN THAT INTERESTING financial fight for the Pennsylvania Senatorship "armed gangsters and well-known gunmen" played a minor part, but good, solid United States currency was the chief factor. You read of "political workers lined up six deep in Pittsburgh to get their cash and coming out with rolls of money."

No secrecy, no need of it. The kind of government we have was holding an election.

THE UNUSUAL feature in this case was a fight between the political boss and the men with millions. The boss wanted the job for himself, and got it. And he made it expensive for gentlemen that usually buy such Senatorships at a fair price.

COST OF VARE'S VICTORY IS NOW UNDER PROBE

Washington, June 14 (I.N.S.).—Having probed extensively into the campaign expenditures of Senator George Wharton Pepper, and Gov. Gifford Pinchot, the defeated candidates in the Pennsylvania primary, the Senate Investigating Committee planned to turn its spotlight today on the winner, Rep. W. S. Vare of Philadelphia.

All of the Vare lieutenants have been subpoenaed to appear this week and from them the committee hopes to get additional information concerning the cost of Vare's victory. Members of the committee, having ascertained that it cost Senator Pepper and his allies, the Mellons, $1,086,000 to lose the nomination, are curious as to what it took to win.

Vare's friends, however, assert privately that the expenditures of the Philadelphia "boss" will not mount to the dizzy heights attained by the Pepper faction. They point out that Vare had little State-wide organization, depending upon the great Philadelphia machine to pile up votes for him, without great cost.

In the testimony thus far, it has been estimated that Vare spent $181,000.

YIDDISH TROUPE SCORE BIG HIT

"The Air Merchant," a comedy by Simeon Yushkewitz, was presented by the Yiddish Art Theatre Players last night at the Grand Opera House. A good-sized audience was kept in an almost constant state of merriment by the sparkling dialogue and humorous situations of the play. It was a far cry from "The Dybbuk" and the other tragedies that have been presented by this company, to "The Air Merchant," but the audience appreciated the change in atmosphere.

The principal character, Elias Gold, played by Maurice Schwartz, is a Jewish jack-of-all-trades, turned marriage broker to support his household in some fashion. The title of the play suggests that he lives on air, not having much else of worldly goods. There are one or two tense situations, when tragedy impends, but these are all cleared up in the end.

The acting, including the splendid characterization by the head of the company, was capable on the part of the whole cast. Occasionally the scenes descended to farce, in which the Jewish players showed themselves very able.

The company will remain for another week, the first three days of which will be taken up with performances of "The Dybbuk."

"MISS NOBODY" AT OLYMPIC

Anna Q. Nilsson returns to the boyish garb of "Ponjola" in "Miss Nobody," new film at the Washington St. Olympia. In "Miss Nobody," however, Miss Nilsson is not the polished English gentleman of "Ponjola." She is a hobo. Determined to strike out for herself rather than be dependent upon the generosity of worthless friends, she turns to vagabondage.

Miss Nilsson is surrounded by an able coterie of featured players in this production, with Walter Pidgeon as the leading man. Mitchell Lewis, Clyde Cook and Arthur Stone are seen in hobo characterization. Also in the feature classification is Louise Fazenda, contributing the flapperish type of role in which she excels.

"Miss Nobody" was directed by Lambert Hillyer and is an adaptation of the celebrated Tiffany Wells' novel, "Shebo," which achieved popularity in book and serial form.

The featured act on the stage this week is entitled a "Pantomimic Novelty," presented by Johnny Howe and Company. An acrobatic novelty is offered by Four Bellhops—a quartette of gymnasts; McManus and Harris present "Speak-Easy," a comedy act; Griffiths and Young in a comedy concoction "Ain't Love Grand," and Marie Mang—an artistic athletic girl complete the bill.

'SHIPWRECK' ON FENWAY SCREEN

Joseph Schildkraut's latest appearance in the films is made in "Shipwreck," adapted from the Langdon McCormick play, and now on view at the Fenway with Seena Owen as the supporting star. It is a melodramatic story of the sea and a great marine disaster is the feature of the thrilling action.

Far from the polished gentleman type of his previous roles, Schildkraut is this time seen in the lowly guise of assistant to the ship's cook, but, thanks to the inspiration of the gorgeous heroine, he aspires to greater things and finally fights his way at great odds to a flourishing finale. Others in the cast are Mathew Betz, Clarence Burton, Laska Winter, Lionel Belmore and Erwin Connelly. Joseph Henabery is responsible for the direction.

On the same bill with "Shipwreck" the Paramount Junior Stars are seen in their first film, "Fascinating Youth." Starting Wednesday, Priscilla Dean and John Bowers will appear in a crook melodrama, "The Dice Woman." Sharing this bill, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are scheduled in the war comedy, "Behind the Front."

Washington, June 14.—Army recruiting officers have been advised by the War Department to renew recruiting activities which were suspended last April.

READY FOR BIG CHARLESTOWN CELEBRATION

Charlestown's celebration of the "Glorious Seventeenth"—the 151st anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill—will begin the night before with a 30-foot bonfire on the Sullivan square playground, to be followed by four banquets and a monster military and civic parade on Thursday afternoon.

David B. Shaw

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, U. S. Senator William M. Butler, Governor Fuller, Mayor Nichols, Congressmen John Douglas and James Gallivan and other notables in national, State and civic affairs, will be speakers at the community banquet to be held in the Charlestown Armory.

MIDDIES TO PARADE.

The annual night before banquet of Bunker Hill Council, Knights of Columbus, will be held in K. of C. Hall, High street. The Northern Club of Boston will hold its banquet in the Charlestown High School. The banquet of St. Mary's Women's Club will be held in its rooms in Monument square.

The parade will start from the corner of Bunker Hill and Elm streets with Chief Marshal John J. Doolin in charge. A feature will be the appearance of 1,200 cadets from the Naval Academy, Annapolis.

MUSSOLINI'S STRENUOSITY AGAIN AMAZES FRIENDS

Rome, June 14 (A.P.).—An indication that Premier Mussolini has recovered the tremendous vitality for which he was famous before his illness of a year ago is seen by friends in his strenuous way of spending the last two Sundays. On June 6 he drove his racing automobile more than 300 miles, while yesterday, after four hours of motorboating on the Tiber, he enjoyed, until midnight, a private violin concert at the Villa Torlonia.

BRAZIL QUITS LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Geneva, June 14. — The Brazilian government today announced its formal withdrawal from the League of Nations in a telegraphic message to the League Secretariat.

By this step Brazil completes the action begun last week when Senor Mello Franco, Brazilian delegate to the league resigned from the council. Although she has resigned, Brazil remains a member, by virtue of the covenant, for, two years from the time the message was sent. It is dated Saturday, June 12.

The resignation was the direct result of the controversy over seats in the council, the South American government insisting upon a permanent seat in the face of opposition by all the other delegates with the exception of Spain. The other delegates are determined to keep the pledge, made at Locarno, to give Germany a permanent seat in the League. The action of Brazil did not come as a great surprise. It was considered as virtually unavoidable after the resignation of Mello Franco.

A new Brazilian government may take hold in November, whereafter it is confidently hoped that Brazil will ask readmission to the League.

35 Nations at Rotary Meet

Denver, Col., June 14 (A.P.).—The 17th annual convention of International Rotary Clubs opened here today with thousands of delegates from 35 countries. Tonight President Donald A. Adams, New Haven, will preside at a pageant in which 1,200 persons will participate.

BOOTLEGGING, BUT IT IS SILK THIS TIME

Bucharest, Rumania, June 14 (A.P.).—Bootleggers of silk stockings are reaping fortunes in Rumania. There is a prohibitive duty on silks, and articles "de luxe" generally. But the Rumanian woman, who is the best dresser in the Balkans, demands these articles at any cost. The result is that bootleggers, many of them women, bring in thousands of pairs of silk hosiery. Their profits are enormous. Last year the government confiscated $600,000 worth of silk stockings and other expensive articles of feminine wear. Silk stockings of the best quality cost in Rumania $10 a pair.

NUNS AROUSED BY TANK FIRE

All East Boston was illuminated in a yellow flickering early today when the big emergency water tank on Green Hill, Orient Heights, was fired with a damage of $5,000 to the wood part of the structure.

Because the tank is hundreds of feet distant from any building and there is every reason to suspect incendiarism, an investigation was begun immediately after the fire by Police Captain Hickey of the East Boston station and District Fire Chief Michael F. Silva.

The nearest building is the nunnery of the Franciscan Sisters of Mary, where forty nuns were waked from sleep by the glare of the flames that were visible for miles around.

No wiring is on the tank and there is no possible way for it to catch fire except through the fire being set, according to firemen.

The tank, holding 85,000 gallons of water, is an emergency water supply. Recently the wooden enclosing structure was repaired by the city of Boston at a heavy cost.

Now If Henry Had Only Told This to Sweeney!

It's all right to be a man on the street and become confused with radio terms and daylight saving and the like—but what of the reporter that writes about them?

Maybe down in Hull its different, but the city editor's phone rang today and a party we won't name because he is well known up in School street, explained in most regretful tones that he was late for work.

He was!

Explaining, the party, a reporter, said he had been going on railroad or Standard time, whereas, strangely enough, daylight saving time is the Summer mode.

But, of course, daylight saving has been in only a couple of months now!

CANDY BOMB IN LOVE TRAGEDY

Syracuse, N. Y., June 14 (A.P.)—A package that looked like a box of candy carried tragedy into a Syracuse home and Mrs. Arlene Curtis, 50, practical nurse, living in a rooming house on West Onondaga street, is not expected to live as the result of it.

The package carried a bomb. The woman, returning from church, found it waiting for her and carried it to her room to open it. Pedestrians, roomers in the house, the whole neighborhood in fact, was horrified a few minutes later by an explosion which was heard for blocks.

Police found the woman lying underneath a mass of debris. There was not a whole piece of furniture in the room.

Mrs. Curtis was still conscious, but she soon lapsed into a coma, murmuring that the package had been sent by "a Homer man."

Those living in the house say the Homer man was a former lover who visited her frequently until a few weeks ago when a quarrel ended the courtship. Bits of letters found in the room bore out their statements, and have put the police on the trail of a man believed to have recently left Homer and now living in Rochester.

HARRY THAW HOME FOR MOTHER'S 83D BIRTHDAY

Pittsburgh, June 14 (A.P.)—Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, widely known for her philanthropy in the interests of charity and education, celebrated her eighty-third birthday at her home here today. The observance, because of Mrs. Thaw's ill-health, took the form of a reunion, with her children, including Harry K. Thaw, in attendance. Last year, while attending church, Mrs. Thaw fell and sustained injuries, from which she has never entirely recovered. Mrs. Thaw's charities are scattered throughout the world.

TWO ROSES PAY RENT OF CHURCH AND ORGAN

Reading, Pa., June 14 (A.P.).—One red rose in payment for ground rent and one white rose in payment for an organ were given to William Haejer, of Germantown, descendant of Casper Wistar, by the congregation of the Trinity Reformed Church, at Tulpehocken, at the conclusion of the annual Feast of Roses.

Casper Wistar gave 100 acres to the congregation in 1745. The deed stipulated that one red rose was to be paid to the Wistar family each year. The family gave an organ to the church for which one white rose annually was demanded.

BOY KILLED IN JOY RIDE AT BROOKLYN

New York, June 14 (I.N.S.).—A joy ride in a borrowed car resulted in the death today of Edward O'Hara, nineteen, and injuries to two others, one of whom may die. The car crashed into a telegraph pole in Brooklyn.

The injured are George Bush, twenty-five, who is dying, and Leslie Douglas, twenty-one, who sustained serious internal injuries. The driver of the car, Francis Griffin, twenty-one, was held, charged with homicide.

MALDEN GIRL DANCE QUEEN

Gloria Logue, popular Malden dancer, and winner of a beauty contest at Nantasket several seasons ago, has the distinction of training the ballet of dancing girls, which will be one of the feature spectacles of the Sesquicentennial Exposition in Philadelphia.

Rehearsals, which are under the supervision of Miss Logue, will be conducted on one of the largest stages in the world. Her beauty ballet and floral pageant as well as a waterway carnival will traverse the miles of lagoons and lakes of the Centennial grounds.

Miss Logue first gained fame as a dancer in Boston theatres and was chosen for the trainer of the ballet on account of her acrobatic and classic dancing in a musical revue a few months ago.

FATE VEILS MYSTERY OF SHIP AFIRE AT SEA

Cordova, Alaska, June 14 (I.N.S.).—The fate of an unknown vessel on fire in Northern Pacific waters remained a mystery today. Efforts of the the naval communication service to determine the ship's identity so far have been fruitless. "Fire! Fire! S. O. S., S. O. S. Position fifty-two; thirty-five."

This faint distress call heard by two United States naval radio stations a 3:40 p. m., Sunday, has been followed by silence. Naval operators recognized the transmitting to be from a Japanese vessel, but were unable to make out its call letters due to interference.

DEGREES FOR GEN. BROWN AND EDWARD J. PEARSON

ANCIENTS PART OF BIG PARADE

Philadelphia, June 14 (A.P.).—The Governors of the thirteen original States or their representatives are here today to participate in Philadelphia's celebration of Flag Day and in exercises marking the formal dedication of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition. The first American flag was made here by Betsy Ross a century and a half ago.

A military parade, in which the Governors and the brilliantly uniformed military organizations of the thirteen States will march, was a feature of the all-day program. There will be more than fifty of these historic military groups. Every uniform of American history up to and including the Civil War will appear.

In the vanguard will march the commands of the thirteen colonies which compose the "Centennial Legion," and in whose ranks are still several officers who marched in the Centennial parade on July 4, 1876.

New England members of the legion includes the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston, First and Second Governor's Footguard and New Haven Grays, Connecticut; Bristol Artillery, Rhode Island; Amoskeag Veterans, New Hampshire; Worcester Continentals, Massachusetts.

YALE TO HONOR CROWN PRINCE

New Haven, Ct., June 14 (I.N.S.).—Yale University today extends a warm welcome to Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, who spent his last day in New York visiting Sagamore Hill at Oyster Bay and renewing his acquaintance with Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt.

The visit to Sagamore Hill was one which the Crown Prince had been planning for in the Spring of 1910 in Stockholm, when Sweden's future king met President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Upon the arrival of the Prince at New Haven he will be received in the tower room of the Memorial Quadrangle by officers of the university. Tonight, at a special convocation, the fourth in the history of Yale, the Crown Prince will be given the degree of doctor of laws.

RAIN TUESDAY, THEN HOT, IS WEATHER MAN'S MENU

The Weather Man says Boston will have showers tomorrow and that any tendency toward a rise in temperature will be counteracted by northeast winds. According to statistics New England is having normal weather for this time. Low barometric pressure, however, means rain, which has swept the Middle West, is due here.

A warm wave, reaching 90 degrees in St. Louis, Kansas City and Indianapolis has hit most of the Southwest, but it won't be any warmer in Boston for the next few days.

BELIEVE BRITISH MINE STRIKE IS NEARING END

London, June 14 (A.P.).—Rumors were heard today that things were moving toward an ending of the coal mine deadlock.

Significance is attached in some quarters to a statement made by A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, in a speech at Penzance: "I shall be called upon soon, perhaps sooner than some of us expect," said Mr. Cook, "to sign an agreement for the miners. But it must be a signature on behalf of a million men. If the men want an eight hour day or are prepared to work for lower wages, they must say so."

What do Your Shoes Say About You?

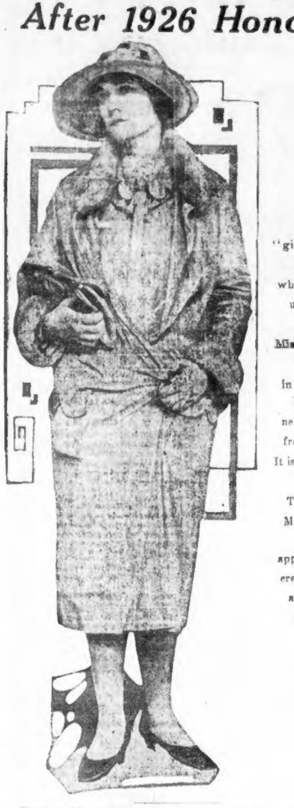
Keep Your Shoes in Tone

JUST as a saxophone off pitch discords a whole dance orchestra so do shoes that don't harmonize mar the effect of your whole attire.

Impressions of you are formed by the condition of your shoes and collar that may make or break your life's success. Be careful to put your best foot forward in shoes that create favorable impression.

While there may be comfort in an old pair of shoes that advantage is overbalanced by their many disadvantages. Select new shoes that truly represent you from the shoe advertisements in the Boston American and the Boston Advertiser.

Boston Girl Aspirants After 1926 Honors



She's a "girl of 1926," of many who qualify as up-to-date. She is Miss Irene Rita Traban, in costume of Frisca, a new material from France. It is soft golden brown. The hat is Milan straw with applications of crepe de chine and velvet flowers.

Fashionably attired in an effective street ensemble of the new material, frisca from France, softly glowing golden brown in hue, Miss Irene Rita Trahan of Brookline is another typically well dressed young woman of poise and personality whose photograph goes before the four fashion and art authorities who will select the Boston Girl of 1926.

Are you aware of the interesting opportunity the Boston Evening American opens to personifiable, smartly dressed young women in its quest for The Boston Girl of 1926.

A fashion authority, a distinguished sculptor, an eminent artist and the nationally known director of the famous Sargent School for Physical Education will within a few weeks decide who is the Boston Girl of 1926.

DECIDING FACTORS.

Deciding factors on which they will select her are personality, poise, fashion in attire — the aesthetic impression she creates with the ensemble of these characteristics.

After she is honored with their decision, she will be awarded a beautifully wrought Silver Laurel Wreath and $300 in gold by the Boston Evening American. Two other girls will receive miniatures of Silver Laurel and $250 and $100 in gold respectively with the option, if they care to exercise it, of choosing an evening gown and a street ensemble rather than the gold.

The only limitations in the quest for the Boston Girl of 1926 are these: Neither members of the theatrical profession nor young women in bathing costumes will be considered.

Please bear in mind that this is not a beauty contest. What it actually is, is this—a test to determine how distinctively the girl or young woman of poise and personality displays her innate good taste in her attire.

The Boston Girl of 1926 Editor invites every smartly dressed girl who desires to be considered for the Silver Laurel to send in a photograph in which she is wearing some particular gown that is pleasingly becoming. Please identify photographs and send a detailed description of the raiment worn.

MOTHERS INVITED.

Mothers are invited to accompany their daughters to the office of The Boston Girl of 1926 Editor, where photographs will be taken free of charge. Any girl who wishes a photograph taken for submission to the judges may also come in and they will be made without charge.

Numbers of photographs of smartly attired girls well qualified for consideration by the judges are in the possession of The Boston Girl of 1926 Editor. Some will be published; some may not; all, however, will be kept and submitted to the judges for their consideration.

The question has been asked, "May a candidate submit photographs of more than one costume?" The answer is, "Yes."

To elucidate this point.

If a girl with three street ensembles and three evening gowns submitted photographs of each, six in all, there is nothing in the rules which would eliminate any of the six photographs from consideration.

INSURANCE MEN HAVE OUTING

Eleven hundred members of the Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation, Ltd., attended the corporation's annual outing at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, today.

A parade starting from the company's offices on Broad street at 10:30 proceeded to Rowes Wharf, where ferries were boarded for a special train to Lynn and trolley to Swampscott.

After a buffet luncheon Summer sports were in order.

A special dance and entertainment is scheduled for the evening. Bridge tables have been arranged for those who do not participate in the general dancing.

Officers of the company, Edward C. Stone, U. S. manager; Artemus B. Poor, and Franklin D. Horton, assistant managers, and all the heads of department, entered the day's sports.

Chairmen of the various committees are A. A. Herman, J. M. Boyd, F. E. Donnegan, John A. Ross, Fred D. Hamilton, T. W. Bradshaw, A. T. Sweeney, Walter G. Morrison, Richard Murray, William S. Kilduff and A. W. Sargent.

WHIP DRAWN IN WHEAT PROBE

Washington, June 14 (A.P.).—The tariff commission was whipped and spurred into making the wheat investigation in 1923, Commissioner Glassie declared today before the Senate tariff investigating committee.

The inquiry was made rapidly and withoutp roper consideration, under pressure from Commissioner Culbertson, he said. After application for an investigation had been filed by Sidney Andersen, president of the Wheat Council of the United States, he asserted, the commission was urged from various sources to hurry thew ork.

"Culbertson did everything in his power," he added. "The impression was given that the President wished the investigation to be hurried through and the commission soon reflected the agitation outside. I felt that if the investigation should be conducted it should be done in orderly fashion."

SARGENT WILL ADDRESS GRADUATES IN VERMONT

Washington, June 14 (A.P.).—Attorney-General Sargent left today for Ludlow, Vt., where he will address the graduating class of Black River Academy, from which he was graduated in 1883. His return here depends upon the condition of his son-in-law, Sam Pearsons, who is seriously ill in Vermont.

MICHAEL DRISCOLL BURIED IN BROOKLINE

The funeral of Michael Driscoll, dean of the Brookline school board, and for fifty-two years superintendent of streets in Brookline, was held this morning. A requiem high mass was said in St. Mary's of the Assumption Church, Brookline.

Every town department was represented at the funeral and Brookline Town Hall was closed during the services. Among delegations at the funeral were members from the Irish Charitable Society, the Catholic Union and the Massachusetts Highway Association. The pallbearers, all nephews of the deceased, were William Driscoll, J. Francis Driscoll, Edward Mullowney, Harry Mullowney, Arthur Johnson and William O'Hearn. Burial was in Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Newporters Busy Getting Ready to Entertain Swedish Royalty

NEW GOLD AND WHITE BALLROOMS, swimming pools al a-sparkle, "Regulars" appearing again on "The Avenue" and Royal Highnesses lending their august presences all combine to throw a glamorous aura over Newport's opening season.

THE STUART DUNCANS (parents-in-law of the one-time Betty Thorndike, now Mrs. John Paterson Duncan) add to Newport's established gayety with the handsome new white and gold ballroom just completed at "Bonniecrest," and will christen it with an enormous ball in honor of the John Duncans.

AT THE WILLIAMS BURDEN estate, "Oakwood," an outdoor swimming pool, spaciously proportioned and beautifully situated, is a charming new feature added to the Summertime establishment directed by the former Anne Kountze.

THE SWEDISH ROYAL progress, each moment becoming more and more an immense personal triumph for these popular visitors, centres immediately in Newport, where entertainmen by the exalted of that colony fills the better part of two days, just before their Highnesses come to Boston.

ADDED TO THE FUNCTION list is Mr. and Mrs. Hakan B. Steffanson's luncheon at Vedimar, Newport, on Wednesday next, preceding the garden fete at Beacon Hill House, one of the Curtiss James hospitalities. Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte are among those bidden to the luncheon.

MRS. EARL E. T. SMITH

The former Consuelo Vanderbilt will spend part of the Summer at Newport.

NEWPORT WELCOMES right royally the Saxham Drurys, back from London following their marriage in New York last Autumn. A daughter of Elbridge T. Gerry, Mrs. Drury as Miss Mabel Gerry, was a Newport figure of much importance.

THEY'LL BE at "Sea Verge," the Gerry villa at the end of the avenue, for most of the Summer at least. Miss Angelica Gerry is a sister of Mrs. Drury and Congressman Peter Goelet Gerry—who recently married Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt of Biltmore, N. C.— is a brother.

SAXHAM DRURY is a bit of Picadilly transplanted in America—and as husband to the former Miss Gerry steps into a Newport niche quite all his own. The first Newport season of the Saxham Drurys promises to be a notable one.

MR. AND MRS. PETER A. B. WIDENER, 2D, of Philadelphia, put up at the Muenchinger-King temporarily while deciding about a Summer establishment. Before her marriage to Mr. Widener, son of Joseph E. Widener, Mrs. Widener was Mrs. Frederick G. Peabody and, therefore, Fifi Widener Leidy is her sister-in-law.

RUMOR SAYS that the vivacious and likeable Mrs. Fifi Widener Leidy is to spend most of the Summer with her brother and sister-in-law, at the Winthrop cottage: joyous news to Newport, of course, both the smart Summer colony and the year-round residents.

THERE'S NO MORE infectious smile in all Newport than the charming Fifi's, and her flittings up and down the avenue by motor are signals for many a greeting, none more sincere than the salute of that Newport fixture, genial Officer Casey who directs the avenue's traffic at Bath road.

WINTHROP COTTAGE, so-called, the Newport estate occupied by the P. A. B. Widener, is a possession of Mrs. Harold Sands (Muriel Winthrop), whom Boston knew briefly as the first wife of "Dicky" Boardman, yachtsman, bon vivant and important figure in Boston's business world.

MRS. MURIEL WINTHROP BOARDMAN became Mrs. Sands of New York, and Newport, not so very long ago. A beautiful woman and counted one of Newport's most attractive feminine lights, Mrs. Sands plans a change of base this Summer and joins the Bar Harbor exclusives.

E. ROLLINS MORSE is in Newport for the Summer, with apartments at LaForge Cottage on Touro Park. Villa Rosa on the avenue, right in the heart of Newport's summertime activities, is now the property of Mrs. James B. Haggin. For many years the Morses (Mrs. Morse was Marion Steedman of Boston), occupied the place.

NEWPORT'S HORTICULTURAL Society, with plans completed for two flower shows, sets the first for June. Lovely gardens, just in the glory of their early Summer freshness, are vastly interesting to a distinguished coterie, to which beautiful gardens are always a joy to see.

HUNDREDS ATTEND FIRST 'PORCH SERVICE'

Tremont street in front of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul held more than 500 persons during the first porch service which the weather permitted holding.

Traffic officers held back motorists at either end of the crowd, while many gathered on the Common were attracted by the chorus of the large cathedral choir which gathered on the steps to sing several hymns. The Rev. Charles P. Peck of the Cathedral staff spoke.

DEAREST ANNE:
June is getting into full swing and branch shops are now being opened up at the resorts.

The Call of Cape Cod

Cape Cod has an irresistible appeal to thousands every Summer. Again Thayer McNeil is opening their fashionable shop at Hyannis and they have a hearty welcome awaiting you.

All the exquisite Summer shoes in the new tones and white for both men, women and children suitable for every occasion and age are most atractively displayed. Shoes for golf, tennis, dancing and walking—light kids, sturdier buckskins and pin seals, canvas cretonne and raffia to say nothing of fascinating models in tune with alluring music on Summer evenings.

Stockings—Thayer McNeil does have wonderful ones, and their prices are no higher than at inferior shops in town. Pure lisle and imported wool for sports in plain and figured pastel shades to go with dainty Summer vacation clothes. Also gauzy chiffons for weddings, teas and dancing.

As an innovation Thayer McNeil have a few beautiful handbags, many trimmed with reptile leather to match the snakeskin and lizard effects on their modish shoes. You would love them; nowhere have I seen such exquisite and exclusive bags.

At the Hyannis shop the service is perfect. You can be fitted just as readily as at 47 Temple Place or 414 Boylston Street or at their Summer shop in Magnolia where the North Shore colony congregates for the best in footwear. Special orders from nearby Boston will be filled within twenty-four hours. Now if you are down on the Cape for the Summer and when you go to Hyannis for your shopping, do drop into this lovely shop of Thayer McNeil's. You are no longer cut off from the best as it is again right here in your midst. This shop has the same lure as that of Cape Cod itself. I am fascinated with them both, and I know you won't be able to resist their spell.

Special Sale of Wash Silks

—Yearly throughout the month of June Thresher Bros., 19 Temple Place, have the most extraordinary sale of all their silks. Great savings may be made through the tremendous reductions. I want to tell you about some of their particularly good wash silks.

Beautiful quality striped washable crepe de chine is now only $1.86 a yard, originally $.90. The colors and combinations are really lovely. Gorgeous green, lavendar, blue, rose and tan and white stripes. Guaranteed washable, won't run or fade. A clever girl can run up little dresses like the sketch using both Thresher's silks and a McCall pattern (blouse No. 4565 and skirt No. 4282), for a fraction of the price of a ready-made frock.

Washable striped broadcloth is greatly marked down, too. Thousands of yards (all silk) reduced to $1.55. Exquisite quality, 33 inches wide, in both narrow and and wide stripes. Most fashionable as well as cool and serviceable. Washes beautifully and nothing equals it in wear. Awfully sporty for tennis and golf. Plain colors, too. So fresh and clean looking.

You wouldn't believe that this extra fine crepe shantung of Thresher's washes. Comes in 25 exquisite wanted colors reduced from $3.50 a yard to $2.55! Forty inches wide, stunning and practical as it, too, washes. Wonderful value.

Dainty small patterns are the edict of Paris for printed silks. And I saw some of the best looking printed shantung at Thresher's for $1.55 a yard. Dark and light colors. Very Frenchy. An exceptional value.

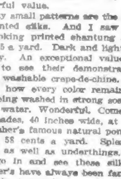
Ask to see their demonstration of best quality washable crepe-de-chine. You will be amazed how every color remains unchanged after being washed in strong soap and almost boiling water. Wonderful. Comes in 70 beautiful shades, 40 inches wide, at $2.55 a yard.

Thresher's famous natural pongee comes as low as 58 cents a yard. Splendid for cool dresses as well as underthings.

Do go in and see these silks for which Thresher's have always been famous and you will make tremendous savings.

Shawls Cloak the Evening Mode

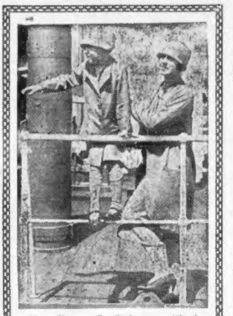
—At the casino, dance or night club, on a warm Summer evening, everywhere one sees the fashionably dressed woman with a lovely shawl around her graceful shoulders. Shawls have become a necessity, and you would be surprised how inexpensively you can now buy them at Filene's!



Callot fringed plain toned shawls are the newest. Glorious colors with deep 16-inch heavy fringe and lovely 54-inch centre. Most striking and only $10.75. Simply wonderful for so little. Exquisite flame to wear with a black chiffon or Spanish lace gown, lovely sky-blue, maise, peach, flesh, orchid as well as white.

Shawls are the rage and have taken the place of all other cloaks. They sway to the rhythm of music and lend charm and grace to young and old. Very handsome are the embroidered ones, and now you can get them at Filene's for as little as $16.50! Brilliant embroidery covers the dainty 54-inch white, peach, nile or yellow backgrounds. All have beautiful hand-knotted fringe, and every time I see them I marvel at the price. Even when I was in Europe last Summer I hunted everywhere and I couldn't find a single one for so little. Nowhere in the world can one get such values as right here at Filene's. I couldn't resist a white one embroidered in wonderful reds and a light blue with Callot fringe; and just think, I bought both at Filene's for less than half the price of one elsewhere.

Filene's also have the new gorgeous metal cloth brocaded shawls, colors on silver or gold. And lovely chiffon squares that make very dainty wraps. Plain centre with wide border and square corners at $10.00, $12.50 and $15.00. Shawls—shawls—shawls everywhere, but none to compare with these at Filene's on their street floor.



Mrs. Henry T. Fleitman with her little daughter, Priscilla, both dressed in the latest yachting clothes and waving "au revoir" to their friends on shore.

Just In—Latest Model

—stockings made by the Holeproof Co. They have just arrived at Talbot's, 395 Washington St., and are on sale in their new enlarged department. These all pure silk stockings (service weight) are the last word in fine silk stocking manufacturing. Absolutely perfect from top to toe. Talbot has been waiting for a week or more for this quality stocking, but the demand has been so terrific throughout the country that they have only just come in. $1.95 a pair. Extra fine quality pure silk with silk flare top, so you can wear your skirts as short as Paris dictates without the uncomfortable feeling and worry of wondering if you are showing a cotton top. This hosiery is the type I have been trying to get for months at this price, and I am so glad that the Holeproof Co. is making them, as now we can all have style, comfort and service at a minimum price. Talbot's have all sizes and the latest tones, including shadow, grain, French nude, Piping Rock, nouveau beige, champagne, mauve taupe, gun metal and black and white.

I examined this new stocking most carefully and they certainly come up to expectations; with extra fine lisle heel, sole and ex toe, the maximum of wear is insured. Absolutely the best stocking made for service combined with beauty. Marvelous for sports, business and dress.

Talbot's all silk from top to toe chiffon Holeproof stockings at $1.95 are equally superior to all other chiffon stockings at this price. Sheer, silky and exquisite. Lend great allure and fascination to stylish ankles. Try them; they really do wear and are of a quality one expects to pay lots more for. Go into Talbot's and see these all silk and all chiffon stockings at $1.95 each. Mail orders filled, all colors and sizes.

The Sleep of the Just —depends more on the pajamas a man wears than anything else. So I ran into Talbot's, 395 Washington St., the other day to get John some new ones and, my dear, I found just the thing he has been asking for lately —beautiful fine soisette at $2.45 a pair or 3 for only $7.00! Really $3.00 a pair would be cheap for them. So much nicer than silk, the texture is very finely woven and they are cooler, too. Talbot's have them in all the attractive colors as well as white, each trimmed with rayon frogs.

John says, "To sleep in lovely soft soisette pajamas is the nearest thing I know of to Heaven on a Summer's night." So I got him 3 pairs at Talbot's, and I know now he will get cool, refreshing sleep that is so necessary during these coming warm months. Every man should have three or four pairs of soisette pajamas when he can get them for so little at Talbot's. Of course, they have other types but these are a joy to sleep in.

While I was in Talbot's I looked at some athletic broadcloth underwear. All in one piece and for this week only $.95 a suit. They are guaranteed in sizes and are nice and comfy and roomy. I bought John one to try, and I am going in today and get him 3 more. Simply remarkable at this price, and are again one of the extraordinary values for which Talbot's have always been famous. All sizes to fit all types. You, of course, know how wonderfully broadcloth wears and these have an exceptionally fine sheen and polish into the bargain! Do go in and get your husband and the boys fitted out before the intense heat finally settles in. There is no place like Talbot's.

Let's Go for a Swim!

—I just got the best looking new bathing suit and I am dying to wear it. If you need one you ought to go to Hovey's and see their wonderful array—they have every type imaginable. I have been to every shop in town and nowhere have I seen such a variety with all the smart accessories and such low prices.

Very special are one-piece knit swimming suits at $4.00. Pure wool, wonderfully fitting and practically unshrinkable. Essential to good swimming. At $6.00 are literally hundreds of knitted suits that fit snugly at the same time possessing elasticity where they should. These come in red, rose, purple, jade, black, blue and orange, also plain colors with gorgeous stencil flower designs that won't wear off, as well as many jacquard and novelty embroidered patterns. Stunning, the newest thing. In this department at Hovey's you will find suits of satin finished surf cloth from $3.00 to $5.00. Also at $5.00 are striking cretonne suits. Most becoming and gay, fascinating patterns. Very effective are splendid quality taffeta suits with four rows of scalloped ruffles on the skirt. These hide the size of one's figure, and I love taffeta as it drys so quickly and doesn't cling. Brilliant scarlet, lovely blue, purple and bright jade green. Suits like these cost lots more at other places. They look so pretty with a stylish matching bandana worn about your shoulders on the beach and over a plain cap in the water. Of course, Hovey's have other marvelous suits of the best quality silks that look like smart little dresses, many have matching panties all most reasonably priced.

Fetching are cretonne rubberized capes at only $2.95. Gay with the brilliant hues of sunshine. Doll bags of cretonne, rubber lined to swing on one's arm and hold a bathing suit, make wonderful gifts and bridge prizes, $2.50 each. Most attractive.

Don't forget Hovey's for bathing suits, caps, belts, shoes and capes. They have the best and the cheapest.

Bridal Bouquets of Beauty

—At that all-important occasion—the wedding—bridal bouquets play an outstanding part. Penn the Florist, 124 Tremont St., makes distinctly beautiful shower bouquets that add charm and allurement to the exquisite loveliness of a bride. And you would be surprised how inexpensive they are—only $15.00 for huge bouquets of white sweet peas and lilies-of-the-valley, with a myriad of dainty ribbon streamers with lilies attached in shower effect. They are simply heavenly! This combination of flowers has a fascinatingly sweet perfume and lilies with their graceful pure white little bell-like blossoms seem to be the symbol of joyful wedding bells.

Many brides like a bouquet of large white roses and sweet peas. These may be had from Penn for about $10.00. They are stately and most suitable to certain types of brides.

Very fashionable this year is the bride who carries flowers of some delicate tint, such as gorgeous pink roses and lilies or sweet peas with sweetheart roses tied to pink or silver streamers. Flowers like these relieve the all-white effect and blend in harmony with the colorful bouquets of the bridesmaids.

Penn is simply wonderful in planning color schemes for weddings, as well as decorating the house and church. Everything is perfect when it arrives, from the small boutonnieres for the groom and ushers to the dainty basket of flowers for the little flower girl. And the whole most inexpensive.

For the bride of past Junes are some particularly welcome anniversary presents at Penn's, such as handsome gold vases from $2.00 up. A large one filled with lovely flowers is most appealing and something new. Every wife hopes to be remembered at this time and nothing touches her heart and kindles her love anew as a gift of flowers. And suitable ones can be bought at all prices at Penn's.

The June bride must go in and pick out the type of wedding bouquet she wants now, and she will be gloriously radiant and happy if it is bought at Penn's.

I Went To

—A wedding on Saturday and, my dear, I never saw such lovely clothes, and I am sure they were all bought right here in Boston. I do love our shops, you really can get anything you want and our prices are ever so much lower than in other cities. There are so many social events going on now with horse shows, the races, dances and weddings, that everyone has to have a host of clothes suitable for all occasions.

It has been so warm the last few days that at last I have been in swimming and the water did feel good and really was not cold at all.

Every day heaps of people are flocking to the Cape, North and South Shores and everything is getting under way.

Will write you again next week and tell you of more of my valuable finds. Until then—
Affectionately,

Priscilla

Martha Lee's Talks to Housewives

HOPE CHEST SUGGESTIONS

A reliable cook book is one of the most valuable furnishings of a Hope Chest. It also makes an acceptable or even a wedding present, but unfortunately, the average cook book contains, perhaps, 20 or 30 recipes that the bride will actually use, and 500 or 600 others too expensive or too elaborate for the housekeeping novice.

The Martha Lee Scrap Book, as you probably all know, offers you an opportunity to make a worthwhile cook book at small expense. It is a generous sized book, bound in white washable leather cloth, lettered in silver, containing a picture of the lady herself, as well as a complete index. Unlike most scrap books, the pages are of snowy white bond paper on which you can either write your favorite recipe or paste in newspaper clippings.

I believe you all know Martha Lee recipes are absolutely reliable. Such a book will surely be worth many, many times its price which is 72c. You can order it direct from Martha Lee, care Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston. You can send 72c, in stamps, money order, check or registered letter.

CHOCOLATE POTATO CAKE

I think that 99 people out of 100 love chocolate cake and it seems too bad that this particular variety so often either falls or comes out so dry that there is danger of its flying out of your ears when you swallow.

Here is a recipe for a chocolate caramel potato cake, however, that is guaranteed to keep moist almost indefinitely, especially if you pop it into a stone crock after it is cool. It is economical to make, too.

CHOCOLATE CARAMEL POTATO CAKE

Cream a ½-cup of butter and add gradually one cup of sugar. Beat until very fine and smooth. Then add 2 well beaten eggs, ½ cup of milk and ½ cup of hot riced potato. Beat thoroughly and add one cup of flour, preferably cake flour. Mix and sift it with 2 teaspoons of baking powder, ½-teaspoon of cinnamon, ½-teaspoon of clove, ½-teaspoon of nutmeg and ½-cup of grated chocolate. Last of all add ½-cup of chopped nut meats. Turn into a well-buttered and floured pan and bake in a moderate oven 55 minutes. Remove from a pan and cover with fudge frosting made by adding one cup of confectioners' sugar to ½-cup "immediate" chocolate sauce, or by your favorite recipe. The sauce is a wonderful time saver, however.

Duchess Potatoes

½ cup milk
½ cup grated cheese
1 cup cold mashed potatoes
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon minced parsley
⅛ teaspoon paprika
1 cup buttered bread crumbs

Scald milk in double boiler, add cheese and stir until cheese melts; add mashed potatoes and seasonings. Beat and put through a potato ricer, then into a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle top with buttered bread crumbs and bake until brown.

HAM BAKED IN MAPLE SYRUP

Place half a ham in cold water, heat slowly and simmer gently, allowing twenty minutes to the pound. Remove the rind, cover the fat with cloves, and bake one hour in a moderate oven, basting frequently with maple syrup.

A MONDAY MIRACLE

LIES IN A CERTAIN electric washing machine. Washes faster and washes cleaner; no idle suds at all. Compact (only 25 inches square) clothes can be put in or taken out while washer is running. Cast aluminum tub can't warp, rust, or corrode; cleans itself. Easily adjusted to your height and height of tubs. You don't have to rub wristbands or collars and, best of all, it washes dainty chiffons and georgettes with ease.

DON'T SUFFER with swollen veins! Antiseptic liniment gives immediate relief. After first few applications, congestion is relieved and throbbing pain disappears. With continued treatment, limbs are restored to normal condition. Fine for the ache between your shoulder blades after the first paddling or tennis of the season, too.

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE but it's really true that a certain oil is wonderful for washing windows. Just pour a little in some water, dip a cloth in it and then wring fairly dry and clean! After polishing with a dry cloth, the result is a revolution in housecleaning helps. Leaves brilliant cleanliness. Fine for mirrors, glassware and cut glass, too. Inexpensive.

DON'T WASTE TEA! Use tea balls made of famous brand of orange pekoe. Beautifully blended; the aristocrat of teas. And how easy it is to make iced tea with these tea balls! No boiling water necessary. With a dash of lemon, powdered sugar and a chip of ice to frost it, you'll have the most delicious iced tea you ever tasted. I'll gladly send you the recipe.

RECOMMENDED BY EXPERTS in kitchen lore, is a handy little cleaning brush. Rustproof, steel wire; cleans wood, metal and household utensils with astonishing thoroughness. 20c. The secret of my shining pots and pans.

A NEW VOGUE of whipped ice cream is sweeping the country. It's so deliciously tempting; light and airy. Smoother than ordinary ice cream and easier to make. Made with specal whip freezer. The cream's as light as a cloud; has reserve ice space making only one filling of ice necessary; clamp to hold it on table. $2. You've a treat in store for you!

THE KIDDIES will lose clothes at camp unless you mark them carefully. Do it without sewing or ink! Just press these name markers in with hot iron. Indelible; can't wash out. Invaluable for marking household linens, too. Carton of 9 dozen of any name in block or script letters only $1.

USE A SILVER polish that's made by the largest silverware manufacturers in the world. Comes in shaker powder can; easy to use. Saves time scrubbing at a cake. Makes your silver shine magically with a minimum of labor.

I'VE LOTS MORE to tell you, but there isn't any room. Just watch the paper next week! If you like any of these items, simply check them, attach your name and address and a LOOSE stamp and send it to me. By the way, be sure to attach your name and address. LEFT-OVERS ARE GOOD WITH CHEESE

In making use of left-overs, there is the one food which will so completely disguise the appearance and enhance the flavor as cheese, and through combinations of cheese with left-overs, many attractive and toothsome dishes may be evolved. Try these.

Ham and Cheese Rarebit

1 lb grated cheese
1 can tomato soup
1 green pepper diced
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups milk
2 tablespoons flour

Make a sauce of the milk and flour. To this mixture add the tomato soup, the dried pepper, grated cheese, and finally ham. It may be served on toasted rounds of bread or with plain boiled rice.

A handy twine holder is a small funnel suspended from the kitchen wall in a convenient place by the small ring attached to it; place the ball of twine inside and run the end of string out through the funnel end.

Members of the County Carlow Association will have their mid-Summer social and dance in Corinthian Hall, Deacon building, South End, on Wednesday evening. The men's committee is headed by Joseph P. Dargan. Others are: William B. Harkins, Patrick F. O'Neill, Bernard J. Harkins, Michael R. Kinsella, Richard P. Nolan, Edward J. Mulrooney, John J. Foley, Timothy Buckley, Patrick J. Doyle, Edward Fitzgerald, James Corcoran, John J. O'Leary, William Eustace, John J. Byrne, James Joyce and John O'Neill.

The ladies' committee is made up of Mrs. Joseph P. Dargan, Mrs. Mary E. Kinsella, Mrs. Michael R. Kinsella, Mrs. Mary McNamara, Mrs. John J. Foley, Mrs. Michael P. Nolan, Miss Ellen Rice, Mrs. Patrick J. Doyle, Mrs. Edward J. Mulrooney, Mrs. Annie O'Neill, Miss Margaret O'Leary and Mrs. Annie Morgan.

Many special features have been arranged, in keeping with the night before the Battle of Bunker Hill anniversary.

Congressman John J. Douglass was the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the County Donegal Association, held last night in Mishawum Hall, Charlestown. His subject was "The United States of America." During the course of his address, Congressman Douglass criticized the "National Origins" clause in the immigration bill. Other speakers included Assistant District Attorney Hugh Campbell, Alderman Ernest C. Carr of Somerville and Attorney Charles F. Hilly of Roslindale. President Michael Lynch was the toastmaster.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Corkmen's Association yesterday afternoon in Hibernian Hall, Charlestown. President Matthew Donovan presided and addressed the members in regard to the recent field day held on Russell Field, North Cambridge. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the affair also made its report.

Mere Males Capture Prizes for Two Best Pictures of Week

PLAYMATES

BABY'S SMILE IS WINNER

The two-year-old nephew and niece of one year conspired to bring first prize in the American's picture contest to E. S. Pinkham of No. 53 Marcella street, Roxbury. It was the little girl's smile that did it.

Two men carried off the honors today in the Boston American Unusual Picture Contest. For the last several days members of the opposite sex have been taking most of the awards.

E. S. Pinkham, of No. 53 Marcella street, Roxbury, is winner of the first prize, a pair of $5 seats for the annual boxing and athletic carnival of the Crosscup-Pishon Post, American Legion, at Braves Field, June 28.

Second prize, a pair of $3 seats to the carnival, has been awarded to Gerald Murphy, No. 19 Stillman road, Roslindale.

Women have shown an especial interest in the contest in which each day two prizes are awarded for the two most unusual photos submitted.

Awards are based not on the quality of the photography but on the human interest appeal, the humor and the unusualness of entries.

Take a look at your album. If you can't find a funny or unusual snapshot, then get busy with your camera and send your entry to the Unusual Pictures Editor. Every picture has a chance providing it meets the qualifications. The contest closes June 19. Final winners will be announced on the following Monday, June 21.

WELLESLEY TO AID NEWTON HOSPITAL

Wellesley will join with Newton in financing the new buildings at Newton Hospital, and will share the privileges of the hospital on an equal basis with Newton. Wellesley has accepted the invitation of the trustees to join in making the hospital an inter-community affair. Needham is considering a similar invitation.

T. Raymond Pierce heads the Wellesley committee to raise the community's share in the cost of the buildings. No quota has been set.

The grand total in the campaign for $1,500,000 now stands at $1,034,143.6.

A rally of the leaders in the hospital campaign will be held this evening at the Brae Burn Country Club.

ASK SHIP BOARD TO FAVOR VETS

Washington, June 14 (Universal).—The American Legion has asked the Shipping Board to provide transportation at cost to foreign-born World War veterans and their families who have been marooned overseas because of quota restriction of the immigration laws which were recently changed to permit their re-entrance.

John Thomas Taylor, vice-chairman of the Legion's national legislative committee, wrote a letter asking Chairman T. V. O'Connor of the Shipping Board to aid in every way to help bring back these stranded veterans.

A bill to permit the board to bring these soldiers and their families back at cost has been introduced by Representative John W. Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican floor leader of the House, and Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., of New York.

The plan to bring the veterans back was sponsored by the Hearst newspapers.

Chairman O'Connor will prepare data today for submission to the House merchant marine committee at its Tuesday meeting when the Wadsworth-Tilson bill will be considered. O'Connor is enthusiastically in favor of the plan.

HIS 'LOVE COLONY' WELCOMES GARLAND

Even Victor Loses as War Exacts Golden Toll

Story of a Boston Girl Who Liked Jazz Music and the Bright Lights

She was picturing herself as she would look to the Man in the Gray Suit when she met him on Boylston street this noon.

The Boston Evening American begins today the publication of the story of a Boston girl. She liked jazz, bright lights and excitement and was unwilling to tie herself down to a single suitor. Then came the time when she was no longer beautiful and young. There were bitter moments in which she blamed everyone but herself. The everyday problem of the girl of today is contained in "TARNISHED WINGS." Start it here and now!

CHAPTER I.

IT was early in the morning of Mary Ann Locke's twentieth birthday. It was seven o'clock and high time to be getting up.

But Mary Ann only raised herself on one elbow and stared sleepily across the room where her sister Jinny's bed stood, empty and tumbled, against the sunlit wall. Then she yawned and lay down again, stretching herself like a baby panther.

"No use getting up yet. Jinny has the bathtub, anyway," she said, to herself lazily.

And then, "I wonder if I'll see the Man in the Gray Suit again today. I hope I do."

She smiled up at the ceiling with her clear, green eyes, and gave a long, soft sigh.

She was still smiling 10 minutes later when the door opened and Jinny came in, fresh from the bath.

Jinny was slim and wiry and red-age of 15. She was as hard and unpowdered skin. Jinny looked like a fresh-faced boy. There was nothing girly-girly about her, at the sensible ageof 15. She was as hard and bright and sharp as new nails.

"Hello, Merry! Happy birthday!" she greeted her older sister, "what are you snickering to yourself about! Got a new man on your brain, I'll bet a hat!"

Merry laughed as she got out of bed. She was so happy this morning that she didn't even see the blighting look that Jinny gave her.

"You should just see him, Jin!" she bubbled. "He's the best looking thing in shoe leather. He passes me on the street every day when I go for my lunch, and he just looks a hole through me! Jiminy, but I hope I see him this noon!"

Jinny sat down on the floor and began to pull on her black cotton stockings. "Thank heaven I haven't reached the man-crazy age, that's all," she said fervently, as if she were talking to herself.

Merry didn't bother to answer her. She was standing before the toilet table now, turning her head first to the left and then to the right.

"I think my hair needs washing," she murmured in an undertone and disappeared into the bath room with a bottle of shampoo in one hand and a dried-up half of a lemon in

GIRL CRIES FOR LOST PET

Have you seen Dodie Boy? He's gone and Cynthia Marion of No. 398 Columbia road, Dorchester, is sobbing her heart out for him.

Dodie Boy is a hunting hound, black, brown and white and a year old. He vanished from Upham's Corner. He was Cynthia's pet, and a valuable one, too, for he's worth $200.

So if you have seen Dodie Boy or know anything about his whereabouts won't you please tell Cynthia or the Boston Evening American. There is a liberal reward for the finder and no questions will be asked.

LOVE CULT HEAD OUT OF JAIL

Girls Gather Around as Garland Pays Law's Toll of $827 and Goes to Farm

Allentown, Pa., June 14 (A.P).—Charles Garland, wealthy owner of April Farm, an alleged free love colony, today left the County Jail, having finished a sixty-day sentence after being convicted of a statutory charge.

Before leaving he paid a $500 fine and costs amounting to $327.

It was said several of the "April Farm" colony returned to greet Garland at the farm. It was not known whether Bettina Hovey, mother of the child whose paternity Garland acknowledged, was present.

At the jail it was said Garland received no mail from her.

Last week Garland's wife, Mary Wrenn Garland, began suit for divorce in Massachusetts. When informed of this action in jail, Garland said he would not contest the suit.

J. L. MOTT CO. SUED ON $2,000,000 MORTGAGE

Newark N. J., June 14 (A.P.).—The Guaranty Trust Company of New York today was authorized by Federal Judge Rellstab to institute foreclosure proceedings against the J. L. Mott Company of Trenton on a mortgage of $2,000,000. Claims filed against the company amounted to $3,800 000.

The Mott Company, manufacturing pottery, has been in the hands of receivers for some time. One-half the amount of the mortgage, which the Guaranty Company as trustee was given permission to foreclose, is held by the estate of Andrew Carnegie.

From BOSTON to BROADWAY

By GEORGE M. COHAN

GEORGE COHAN had his troubles trying to make his first hit in New York. Opening a 3-a-day show gives him no chance. Then, just as he was "carrying 'em" at a Saturday night opening, his act is crabbed.

CHAPTER VII

"YOU'LL get rich trying to string me." For the second time that morning, it was all I could think of to say. They had me "going" all right, but I pretended not to mind their banter, so threw a knowing smile at the stage manager and strolled to the back wall and started "limbering up." I was trying to get my bearings. I got thinking again about the great injustice of putting me on to open the show, and was giving Keith and Albee another good "talking to," when suddenly I heard the introductory strain to my opening number and I rushed down to the first entrance and on the stage.

I gave them my opening. NOT A HAND.

Then into an Irish reel. NOT A HAND.

Then into a waltz clog. NOT A HAND. I then recited "The Bootblack's Dream," a dramatic story in rhyme about a "he" Cinderella. NOT A HAND. And then this announcement:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I will now offer for your approval my own conception of the most difficult form of the terpsichorean art commonly known as buck-and-wing dancing. I wish to call your particular attention to the fact that the steps are of my own invention and that no other living dancer has ever been able to master the same routine."

After this modest speech I said to the piano player, "If you please, Professor," and into the dance, finishing with a run up either side of the proscenium arch, back to center stage, and a break and bow. NOT A HAND.

No response of any kind from the thirty-five or forty persons seated in front. As a matter of fact, at least a dozen of them had been reading newspapers throughout my entire act. At one point during the recitation of "The Bootblack's Dreams," one woman commenced to giggle and the rest of the audience hushed her up, but that was the only sign of life they showed during the ten minutes I occupied the stage.

I bowed at the end of the dance, and the piano player "tremoloed" a sustained chord to take me off. I walked to the first entrance bowed again, and made my exit in absolute silence.

"You paralyzed 'em, kid, you killed 'em. They're all dead out there." One of the stage hands said this as I passed him on the way to the dressing room where the other members of my family were waiting to hear the result of my New York triumph. In those days the performers had to remain in their dressing rooms until called for their acts.

"How did you go, son?" asked dad eagerly, as I rushed in with my jaw set and fire in my eyes. He asked the question before he realized my frame of mind.

"I'll get even with Keith and Albee for this, if it's the last thing I

So. Boston's Boy Poet Laureate Arises to Occasion of Day

South Boston may be on a fair way to producing a Lord Byron, or a Shelley, or one of them poets "as is poets." At any rate Walter Jones who is fifteen and lives at No. 257 Gold street walked into the Boston Evening American office with a little verse he had written for Flag Day. Flag Day usually [illegible] a prolific crop of rhymsters but seldom any of Walter's age.

Walter came in asking for the poetry editor and when informed that poetry editors were scarcer than teetotalers deposited his offering with Sinbad, the head office boy. Sinbad thought it was pretty good and shoved it along into the first edition box. Here it is:

OUR BANNER

The banner upon the wall will fly
Long after the fort is stricken.
And never shall that banner die
E'en if the war clouds thicken
Aloft in the blue and cloudless fair
Where the new stars take their stand
It flies for the heroes "over there"
Through the clouds of No Man's land.

FERRERO'S LOGIC HITS STRIFE

Paints Crushing Moral From Last Conflict to Show Cost of Success

By GUGLIELMO FERRERO, the Foremost Historian of Europe

Paris, June 14—Momentous displacements of the gold supply of the world due to the World War, the financial dislocations and difficulties with which victors in the conflict are still struggling, and the efforts of European nations during the past year to settle their war debts on a saving basis, serve to emphasize the fact that modern wars do not pay, either for the victors or the vanquished.

It is a well known fact that during the last ten years the monetary stocks of the world have changed places. An enormous quantity of gold has crossed the Atlantic. Last year the United States was holding up 4,54[illegible] [illegible] that is to say [illegible] [illegible] in the beginning of 1914. It therefore more than doubled [illegible] and this almost entirely [illegible] imports. These imports amounted [illegible] to 1925 to 2,[illegible] dollars. The remainder, rather more than 300,000,000 dollars, was provided by the gold mines of the country.

THE FLOW OF GOLD

Certain of the little nations of Europe which remained neutral during the great war, like Switzerland, Holland and the Scandinavian countries, have benefitted by [illegible] increases, although on a much less considerable scale. This fact [illegible] astonish those who know [illegible] history. All great wars have [illegible] about great displacements [illegible] [illegible] to the [illegible] some countries and the detriment of others.

The Roman conquest was the most remarkable of these in ancient times. During two centuries the Roman armies gathered together all the available gold and silver from the Euphrates to the Rhine and the Danube, to send it to Italy. [illegible] many works of the jewelers' art must have disappeared in the crucibles of those conquerors—insatiable for bullion.

WARS OF CONQUEST

One of the tasks of the Roman conquest was to mint and put in circulation the masses of gold and silver which had [illegible] [illegible] in the civilized Oriental States and in the barbarous countries of Europe, in the form of precious objects, sacred or profane.

When the last and most celebrated of these treasures, that of the Ptolemys, fell into the hands of Octavian after the death of the patri[illegible] the great wars of conquest and the

WALKER TO HAVE 472 'ADVISORS'

New York Mayor Names Big Board of Civic Leaders to Help Him Run City

New York, June 14 (I.N.S.)—Mayor James J. Walker of this city is going to inaugurate a new experiment in municipal government.

Declaring the city's problems are too huge for him, he has announced appointment of a non-partisan committee of 472 men and women, to be known as the City Planning and Survey Committee to survey New York City and plan its future needs.

The committee will endeavor to solve civic problems which have been vexing the city increasingly for years. The 472 members of the committee comprise social, civic, and business leaders. Seven sub-committees have been appointed.

The first meeting, at which Mayor Walker will outline his plans, will be held next Monday. Among the members of the committee are Vincent Astor, Otto H. Kahn, Edwin P. Kingsley, Dwight W. Morrow, Senator Nathan Straus, Jr., Benjamin H. Namm, Franklin Simon, William H. Todd, Ralph Jonas and General Cornelius Vanderbilt.

SHIFT HITS AT CRIMSON COXSWAIN

Red Top, Ct., June 14.—While the Harvard varsity has been carrying on with the same seating a sudden shift of coxswains has surprised Crimson followers.

F. R. Sullivan, 27, has supplanted Will Beer as first cox, with Beer taking command of the jayvee eight. This change will undoubtedly hold good for the race with Yale.

The entire Crimson "navy" has been working hard and is showing marked improvement. The last workout consisted of an eight-mile row over the course, although it was not marked by flags and no time was taken. Coach Haines kept his men rowing at an alternately high and low stroke, changing every half mile.

The crews exhibited great power at the finish. There is also a much better catch than there has been, with a noticeable reduction in waste effort.

The freshman boat was clocked in remarkably fast time during a time row, but the actual figure was not divulged. The conditions were not altogether favorable, which augurs well for the race against the Eli cubs.

The varsity and jayvee shells, with the exception of the two coxswains, retain the same seating, but several changes have been made in Ed Brown's combination boat. Pender and Greer have been tried at stroke and Rice and Riley have been subjected to a number of shifts. No final lineup has been announced, and the trials are expected to continue for several days more.

Middletown, Ct., June 14 (A.P.).—The Wesleyan University swimming schedule for next season, as announced heretoday by Manager Kenneth B. Grady of Binghamton, N. Y., comprises eight dual meets and the New England intercollegiate.

The schedule follows: January 13, Columbia at New York; 15, Boston University; 19, Yale at New Haven; February 4, Springfield; 12, Rensselaer; 19, Amherst; 26, Williams at Williamstown; March 5, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; 12, New England Intercollegiates.

AMATEUR TEAM REGISTERS 57 RUNS IN SIX FRAMES

Detroit, June 14 (A.P.)—Yesterday St. Anthony, Class B, City Amateur Club, won a no-hit, no-run, six inning game from the Order of Foresters by a score of 57 to 0. The winning club made 43 hits. Karunas the winning pitcher, faced only 19 men and struck out 13 of them.

The Saints scored 18 runs in the fourth inning, 17 in the fifth and 12 in the third, being held to one run in the first and only nine in the second.

DeMar, at 38, Running In Marvelous Form

By STED CHANDLER

We have been playing at the absorbing pastime of applying a speedometer to the Mercurial heels of America's Marathon marvel, Clarence De Mar, and in spite of the fact that the results derived can only approximate the truth, they are amazing.

De Mar, since he started running seventeen years ago, has traveled nearly twice the distance of the earth's circumference.

It is a pity that some record has not been kept of each step that this remarkable runner has taken, for as it stands, every figure used in the mathematical solution of this problem has of necessity been an average drawn from DeMar's own estimate of the number of miles he has traveled.

He has competed in eighteen Marathon runs of regulation distance (26 miles, 385 yards), but he has no record of the many other races of distances varying from five to twenty five miles; the figure runs all the way from none at all to twenty in a year.

YEAR ROUND TRAINING.

It has been in the process of training that De Mar has eaten up the mileage. And training for him means a year-round job. Each day he runs to and from work, his home being in Melrose and his place of occupation in Kendall square, Cambridge. Besides this regular routine, he indulges in much extra road work, the amount, however, varying with the season and his physical condition.

De Mar knows the approximate number of miles he has run per week throughout the seventeen years of his active career. There is, of course, room for error both ways, but the chances are that his estimate falls somewhat shy of the mark. Taking this into consideration, and averaging his figures up for the various years, then throwing in his 18 Marathons and attempting an additional average to cover the many other races in which he has competed, we arrived at the total of 43,428—in round numbers, 44,000 miles run in 17 years' time, or 1.7 of double the world's circumference.

AVERAGES 100 MILES.

From 1910 to 1912 De Mar averaged 60 miles a week. The following four years his average dropped off to 10 miles a week, that period being a time of comparative inactivity. From '17 till '19 he increased to 60 a week once more. In 1920 and 1921 his mileage again fell off, this time to about 25 a week. Then in 1922 he began to increase it steadily until he now averages approximately 100 miles a week. The average drawn for the years 1923 to 1926 inclusively is 75 miles a week.

The sum total of these averages is 41,900 miles. Add 468 miles for 18 Marathons and you have 42,368. Add again 1060, a figure derived by averaging the other runs in which he has competed, and you reach the final figure of 43,428. Allowing for error, 44,000 miles is probably not far from a correct estimate.

The praying vegetarian then, had he followed his nose throughout these last 17 years, would be well on his way toward the finish of his second circuit of the globe.

He won his first B. A. A. Marathon in 1911 and then waited eleven years before repeating. People are amazed at his comeback. But that second victory, in 1922, was only the first of three consecutive wins, his last being in '24.

LOOKS TOWARD 1928 OLYMPIA.

He competed in the Olympics of 1912 and 1924, finishing third in the latter. During the war, while a member of the A. E. F. and the Army of Occupation, he ran on numerous occasions, and was fourth in both the A. E. F. and Inter-Allied championship runs.

In this year's B. A. A. run De Mar was third, and critics again asserted that he was through. But to make such broad statements about a man who came back after eleven years, and has been getting better ever since, is taking a long chance. That length was proved when the Melrose star captured first honors in both the National title Marathon from Laurel to Baltimore and the Valley Forge-to-Philadelphia Marathon.

"It was condition that did it," said the runner. "I am in better condition now than ever before." Recent tests made at the Massachusetts General Hospital prove this De Mar is through after nearly twice circumventing the world? Not much! He is already planning for the 1928 Olympics.

Two of Boston's Large Clothing Manufacturers Forced Into Liquidation
I buy their stock from Harry Frieze & Co. for about one-quarter of the cost of same. Worsted Suitings, fine woolens, wonderful Knitted Fabrics, and a wonderful variety of colorings such as a high-priced ready-made manufacturer would use to cut up into Suits and Overcoats to sell retail from $35 to $50. I bought the materials and offer them to Mitchell The Tailor's customers.

Dear Sir:
We have agreed to accept your spot cash offer for the entire stock of woolens of the Pilgrim Clothing Co., recently in liquidation. We believe the price paid by you for this stock is about 25% of its cost.
We are sending the suitings now. The overcoatings will follow when thoroughly sponged and examined.
Yours very truly,
HARRY FRIEZE & CO.

SUIT $15.75 to your measure

I know the season is not right for Overcoatings, but when you take Wanskuck Whitney Weave Overcoatings, high grade American Woolen Co. Plaid Backs and a number of other fine mills, fine faced fabrics that are made to sell retail around $35 to $50, and realize that I am offering to make these to your measure now at a price of $19.75, you should take advantage.

OVERCOAT $19.75 to your measure

This is my introductory notice of my purchase of two of Boston's leading clothiers' liquidated stocks.
P. S.—A number of Strong & Hewat's Coatings, pure virgin wool fabrics, included at the above price.

Lewis and Malcewicz to Clash at Braves Field for a $32,500 Purse

STRANGLER LEWIS and Joe Malcewiz will battle for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship and a $32 500 purse at Braves Field on July 1.

Jack Conway

Paul Bowser landed the outstanding mat bout of the season after weeks of negotiations. He was obliged to outbid Ed White of Chicago and the Cooney Island Stadium to land this wrestling plum

The wrestlers also have the privilege of accepting 60 per cent. of the gate receipts

The purse will be divided on a basis of 60 per cent. to the winner and 40 per cent. to the loser

The articles of agreement call for the wrestlers to each post $3 000 on Wednesday This amount will go as a forfeit for appearance and for the carrying out of the terms of the match Bowser must post $6,000 on Wednesday, $9 000 on June 20 and the balance of $17 500 before six o'clock on the day of the contest.

The wrestlers will report in Boston for training not later than June 19.

The contest will be to a finish. There will not be any three hour limit on the match as has been the case with the big contests here this year. If neither wrestler scores a fall in three hours, the referee will render a decision. This will count as one fall. The grapplers will be allowed a ten minute rest after which hostilities will be resumed.

The strangle hold has been barred Lewis can use his headlock if he wishes, while Malcewicz can call into play toe holds and any other holds he wishes other than the strangle hold.

HONEYBOY FINNEGAN and Joe Glick will hold the centre of the boxing stage this week. These sturdy featherweights will clash in a ten-round bout under the direction of the Suffolk A. A. at Braves Field on Wednesday night.

It will be the second time that Finnegan and Glick have swapped blows in the ring. Their first contest was staged in Brooklyn last December. At the time Honeyboy was at the height of a victory wave and on his way to a world's championship. Glick scored with a couple of knockdowns and won the decision.

The Brooklyn invader comes to Boston with the reputation of a hard-hitting, aggressive, two-fisted fighter. Only last Friday night he matched blows with Eddie Anderson, the Wyoming Cowboy who is famed for his hitting ability, and it was Anderson and not Glick who had to bow in defeat. Glick won easily from Anderson, and scored a clean knockdown over him early in the fight.

The Anderson victory is the last in a brilliant series of achievements which has made Glick the outstanding contender for Tod Morgan's junior lightweight title, the position formerly accorded to Finnegan.

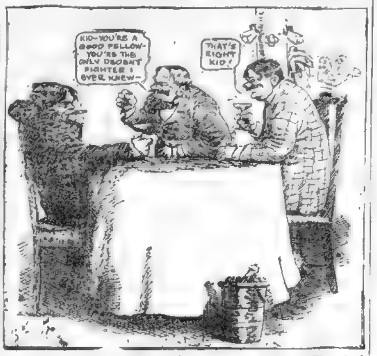
THE KID -:- By Tad

He Cuts Into the Grape

The Life of a Fighter, in Ten Chapters

CHAPTER VI

EVERYBODY knew the Kid now that he was champion featherweight of the world. He went to swell cafes, met swell fellows and was tickled to death with himself. They said he was the greatest fighter the world had ever seen. They had seen hundreds of fights, and they ought to know



KID—YOU'RE A GOOD FELLOW—YOU'RE THE ONLY DECENT FIGHTER I EVER KNEW—THAT'S RIGHT KID!

The Kid ordered up a couple of quarts of grape Occasionally he thought of his mother and brother at home, but, then, they couldn't travel with the company he was keeping There wasn't a chance in the world. What would the sports say if his old mother was sitting around the table with him? No, it was a joke. She belonged at home. He gave her enough money. He fought hard for his and ought to spend it anyway he wanted to

They were good fellows and so was he. Of course, they didn't have as much money as he had, and he bought most of the wet stuff. They sang songs—the singers sang what the Kid liked He was popular every place he went He stuck around until early in the morning and felt sparky all over from the wine. He took auto rides and met swell girls. He had more wine, and when he couldn't drink any more one of the fellows took him to his swell room.

The Kid woke up sick and sore. He didn't have anything to do but enjoy himself, so he took another auto ride. He was getting fat now, but he could train that off any old time. He was still there with the mitts any time a new champ bobbed up

The Kid made money hand over fist. He had weeks engagements that netted him $1,000 per, and, of course, he had to go around and blow a little of it in or they'd say he wasn't a good fellow

He did the line the right way

Nick Flatley.

Even the fans soured by years of disaster are beginning to believe that the drive isn't just a flash. A team that wins eleven out of fourteen, including seven in eight on the home pasture, deserves real support.

THE Pirate pitchers are somewhat shot, but McKechnie will have enough to wiggle through three tough ball games. He has a much improved ball club, according to all reports, and seems to be on the road to another pennant. Max Carey has been out for a time, but is back in uniform, so the invaders will present their meanest lineup.

Local fans will be glad to have a look at Waner and Rhyne, the two Coast kids, who were good enough to push a pair of regulars back to the bench.

JOE GENEWICH will try to snag his sixth victory in a row this afternoon, while McKechnie will probably trot out Johnny Morrison and his famous curve ball. Joe will have to have a lot, because the Wigwam boys have been smacking that apple merrily ever since they discovered that they could win ball games.

Rene Lacoste Bows to His French Rival in Three Straight Sets

Paris, June 14 (I.N.S.)—Henri Cochet won the [illegible] hard courts [illegible] here today when he defeated Rene Lacoste 6—4, 6—3 [illegible].

Cochet was always at top form and had [illegible] beating [illegible] in straight sets.

Cochet played the same [illegible] game against Lacoste as he did in his recent victory over Vincent Richards. Try as he would Lacoste was unable to keep the ball out of the reach of [illegible], whose astounding agility enabled him to return all Lacoste's smashes even when close to the net.

DETROIT YOUTH DIES AFTER BASEBALL MISHAP

Detroit, Mich., June 14 (A.P.)—[illegible] died today without regaining consciousness after being struck on the head with a pitched ball during an amateur game here yesterday.

Inside Golf

A good thought to keep in mind when playing [illegible] shots is to [illegible] the stroke. If you do this it is almost certain that the club will do its share of the work. [illegible] the clubhead [illegible]. You can do this best by following through with your left elbow against your [illegible]. This is the best [illegible]. This has not [illegible] results as starting after one has played with [illegible] club extended in one straight line [illegible] at the finish of the swing and no golfer in America has a better style. This can make your playing the acme of grace and good golf form, plus fine results. Attention to the details does pay. When the thing is done right often enough it gets to be a habit and the golf swing is no exception.

DEMPSEY GOES ON TRIAL FOR SPEEDING

Fresno, Cal., June 14 (A.P.)—Jack Dempsey enters the ring of the law of Chowchilla today, where twelve jurors will render the verdict over the heavyweight champion in connection with speeding charge.

Dempsey's chauffeur, Robert Gates, several weeks ago was fined $50 by Justice [illegible] F. Bates at Madera after being arrested with the champion on a charge of driving sixty-eight miles an hour March 25 last.

Attorneys for Dempsey obtained a change of venue and Justice R. G. Cornell of Chowchilla, who several years ago sentenced Ralph De Palma, race driver, to jail for ten days for speeding in Madera, was then designated to preside at the champion's trial.

Katherine Mearls Triple Winner

Katherine Mearls, the New England A. A. A. U. 50-yard champion, broke her record for that distance and equalled the national record when she again captured the event in the women's district A. A. A. U. championships, held at Franklin Field.

Miss Mearls also won the 100-yard dash and was also a member of the Boston Swimming Association team which won the relay race.

Betty McDonald won the eight pound shot put with a heave of 3 feet 7 inches, the 50-yard hurdles and was a member of the winning relay team.

Maud Tompkins of Concord High School won the high jump and Marion MacDonald of St. Mary's Gymnasium captured the broad jump.

CHARLIE BORAH WORKS OUT FOR A. A. U. TRIALS

Los Angeles, June 14.—Charles Borah, the University of Southern California freshman who recently pushed Charles Paddock in a 9.5 seconds hundred, is working out daily for the tryouts for the National A. A. U. The tryouts will be held June 19. Paddock will not enter the meet at Philadelphia and Borah will be Southern California's greatest representative [illegible].

MARIE JENNEY TO DEFEND TITLE AT RYE

New York, June 14 (I.N.S.)—Miss Marie Jenney, defending [illegible], heads a field of [illegible] golfers who will start in the qualifying round today of the metropolitan women's golf championship at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club, Rye. Among the leading contenders is Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson, former national champion.

CHAMP IS OUT OF TENNIS TOURNEY

A new State tennis champion will be crowned this year. Ray Bidwell, last year's winner of this annual event held at the Longwood Cricket club courts, will not be among the 37 entrants starting play today. There is little change in the make-up of the contestants that strive for the honors this year, the majority of those entered belonging to the local [illegible].

The committee has seeded Larry Rice, Nat W. Niles, J. R. Fenno, Jr., and Malcolm T. Hill, in that order. All matches down to the Niles-Paskine affair will start at 3:30 o'clock, with the other matches slated to start when they have finished. The draw follows:

NOTRE DAME TO PLAY COAST ELEVEN DEC. 4

Los Angeles, June 14.—Ten contests are now on the schedule for the University of Southern California football team during the coming season, following the addition this week of an early season fray with Whittier College for September 25. The Trojans meet Whittier at the same time last season and won 74 to 0.

Other games on the Trojan calendar are: Santa Clara, October 2; Washington State, [illegible]; Occidental, October 16; [illegible]; October 23; Stanford, [illegible]; Oregon Aggies, November [illegible]; November 20, Montana [illegible]; and Notre Dame, December 4. All excepting the California and Oregon Aggie games are in Los Angeles.

Spanish Prince Bets on Right Horse—Richer

Paris, June 14 (A.P.)—Don Jaime, second son of the King of Spain, is leaving for London today with a sizeable increase in his pocket money. The Prince was one of the fortunates who bet on F. De Alzaga Unzue's horse Madrigal in the race at Chantilly yesterday.

Senor Unzue, wealthy Argentine, bought Madrigal at Deauville for 100,000 francs. Yesterday's victory brought Madrigal's winnings to 500,000 francs.

MULLOWNEY TO TWIRL FOR B. C. AGAINST CROSS

The two leading New England Catholic colleges get together on the diamond Thursday afternoon at Fenway Park, when Holy Cross comes from Worcester to play Boston College in the second game of their 1926 season.

Both teams are equally matched and it is a tossup as to which one will win.

Coach Slattery of Boston College makes no bones about whom he will send to the mound Thursday at the Red Sox orchard to face the Purple warriors. Big Ed Mullowney is the choice of the Maroon and Gold mentor. The report is going around on the outside edge that Jim David is going back in an attempt to take a fall from the Eagles.

GRID COURSE LURES PROSPECTIVE COACHES

Los Angeles, June 14.—Applications for enrollment in the University of Southern California's summer coaching courses are being received daily. Coach Howard Jones opens the football-basketball course on June 28 and will instruct for three weeks. He will then go to Colorado to conduct a similar course. Lee Turner will then take up basketball.

Coach Sam Crawford starts his baseball course on June 28 and turns over the track work to Dean Cromwell in July after the Trojan track mentor returns from eastern competition.

State Employes Lure Bass from Reservoir

Clinton, Mass., June 15 (A.P.)—Fish in quantities were being taken in nets today from the waters of Wachusett reservoir. The big bass that sport in the depths of this branch of the metropolitan system were special prey. Boats were being used by the fishermen, something hitherto strictly forbidden, all fishing being done from the shore and then only by those holding special permits from the Metropolitan District Commission. The fishermen were State employes and were fishing for brooders.

By a co-operative arrangement between the commission and the State Fisheries and Game Commission today's expedition was organized. The fisheries commission needs a lot of bass for breeding in State hatcheries and to stock widely scattered ponds and lakes.

Exeter Has Nucleus of Good Team for 1927

EXETER, N. H., June 14.—Exeter loses but a few members of the baseball nine this year and Coach Sam Murch will have some good material to start [illegible].

ARE PARENTS BECOMING LAX?

THERE is much wildness amongst young people of today, much disrespect, much scoffing at old traditions, at religion, at manners and morals, at the wisdom that used to be accredited to age.

But perhaps those of the older generation are no longer as worthy of respect as they used to be! The idea of being comradely with your children is very delightful, has great allurement (especially for the parents), but perhaps in the long run does not work out as well as might be expected.

It is surely a mistake to treat children as if they were chattels, to scold and be always saying "No." It is terrible to restrain and coerce them just because they belong to us and depend upon us. Such ways suit our modern world no better than traveling by stage coach or hanging for the theft of a sheep.

But perhaps in these days of immense and sudden strides, we have gone too far in the other direction. We draw the line nowhere. We have become slack if not actually indifferent. It started pleasantly enough, this spirit of let-go-and-all-will-come-right. Our arguments seemed liberal and logical, and they were extremely satisfactory—to the young people themselves. But the moment all barriers are down, all landmarks leveled and we stand on an absolutely flat table-land with no sign posts, no milestones, nothing to guide us, how shall we know which direction to take and how far to go?

Mothers today wear the same short dresses as their daughters, bob their hair in the same way, flaunt the same flesh-colored stockings, dance at the same restaurants with the same young men. They run about just as much, keep just as slim, and are never to be found at home. Busy, gay, pleasant companions, they nevertheless are no longer the traditional mothers, to be found at home at all hours, proud of their households, their gardens, their home-made jams—

That good old species has almost entirely died out, and I for one miss them.

I've not made such a study of fathers. One was never supposed to look after their morals outside their houses. They were men, and came back at certain hours to be well fed and listened to. So I shall not undertake their special analysis; I'll stick to mothers! And this I must say:

If mothers become sisters and companions, eating up all the distance of the years that separate them from their daughters, they must not be astonished if they do not command the same respect and obedience as the mothers of yesterday, who did not show quite so much of their legs.

The right mean in all things would be the ideal! But who, alas, cares much today for "ideals"?

The RED LAMP by Mary Roberts Rinehart
Author of "THE BAT"

Absorbing Serial by the Author of 'The Bat' Full of Thrills

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE two lightkeepers were alone in the tower; cut off from the mainland by a rushing strip of tide, and no boat could have landed through the surf. And outside, was that unearthly quiet which was more sinister than the storm itself.

Neither one of them moved or spoke, but the keeper remembers that, as the steps came on inexorably, a cold air began to eddy around the small circular room, and that he looked up at the red light apprehensively.

The act, one sees, was the habit of a life-time. Even then, with his body fairly frozen with terror of what was on the staircase, he looked up.

At the top of the second flight the steps paused, and both keepers drew a breath. Then they heard a small dry cough, and the steps recommenced on the third level.

Up and up. The stairs curved round the inside wall of the tower, and they knew they would not see what was climbing until it was fairly on them. They sat there, their eyes glued to the door, and heard the steps coming up the last round. Whatever it was, it was on them. It reached the top, and the next step would bring it into view.

Then the storm burst again, in an explosion that fairly set the tower rocking, and simultaneously the electric lights in the room went out.

It was then that the assistant keeper swears that something touched him, something cold; but there seems to be no doubt, whether that is true or not, that the whole room was filled with the cold eddying wind referred to before.

I prefer to trust the head keeper's statement. Ward is an unemotional type, and this is what he says:

An Apparition

"I was scared enough, but when the lights went out I looked up at the lamp. It's an oil burner, and it was all right. Old Faithful, we call it. Well, you have to understand that we weren't entirely in the dark, even then; some of the red light from above came down and I could see where Jim was standing. I couldn't see him, y'understand but I could see where he was. And there was a third party in the room, over near the stairdoor. That is, he was there one minute; the next he was gone."

They did not make an immediate investigation. True to their type, they ran up and inspected the lamp, but it was "sitting pretty," as Ward says. They had candles, for it was not unusual for storms to put the Oakville light company out of service, and keeping close together they went down through the successive floors of the big tower. They found nothing, and the outer door was still closed and bolted.

In view of so detailed and corroborative a statement, the final support of my early scepticism has had a severe blow. . . .

What would be the change, should we enter another world, with the same faculties we have now, but no limitations in their use? Equipped with limitless faculties, who would care to leave out the emotions? To sorrow, then, to love, even perhaps to hate. And who shall laugh at the poor ghost who, knowing and suffering all things, makes its desperate attempt to avert a wickedness? To convey, through the thick mantle of the flesh, a knowledge that is not conveyable. To stand by, wringing its pale amorphous hands, while crimes go on and unnecessary wretchedness inhabits the earth?

Nothing bodily accounts for personality. Back of everything physical, and greater than anything physical, is the mind. And mind is not an attribute of matter.

Reward of $5,500

July 22nd.

The body has not been found, and the Sheriff has raised the reward to five thousand dollars. This, with Livingstone's original five hundred for the sheep-killer, which is to go to the finder of the murderer as being in all probability the same individual, raises the reward to fifty five hundred dollars.

Today, however, certain information acquired by Halliday has shifted the scene of the search to the salt marshes and the bay, and tonight, as I glance from my window I can see lanterns moving in the marsh beyond the main house and up and down the shore. Jane has made coffee, and those of the searchers who come up this way from the beach have been stopping in.

Every bit of woodland in the county, according to the Sheriff, has been beaten without result, and tomorrow they will drag the bay.

We get a curious reaction from the men who are searching. The police, of course, see in it nothing unusual, and are prosecuting the case with vigor. But the fishermen, always a superstitious crowd, seem to me only half-hearted in the search.

The story from the light-house has convinced them even more of the diabolical nature of whatever is at work among us, and there is current also a tale from some passing motorist that the red lamp was burning in the main house at midnight the night of the 19th.

Coming up from our salt marsh there is more than one who has made a wide detour to avoid the other house. . . .

Halliday's discovery, made today, is as follows. He calculated just how far the truck would have to go after it was hailed, before it stopped, and went back to that point, which was not far from the entrance to the Livingstone drive. Already the crowd of searchers and sensation hunters had pretty well destroyed any clue that might have been left, but about twenty yards from the gates he found marks in the mud indicating that, not only had the truck been backed to that point but it had been turned there and headed back toward Oakville and the bay.

Just where it left the road again, if at all, is a question. I believe Halliday has taken a scraping from the wheels and proposes to have it analyzed. He finds something suspicious in it. I cannot say what.

I have spent today reorganizing my household. None of the women, including Clara, are to leave it after nightfall unaccompanied, and although no entrance into any house has yet been attempted, Halliday and I have spent the late afternoon tightening window locks and adding new bolts where they are necessary.

I took advantage of the opportunity to tell Halliday my suspicions about the doctor. He was so astonished that he let go of a window sash, dropping it on my fingers.

Suspects the Doctor

"The doctor!" he said. "Never in this world, Skipper."

And when I had put forth all my evidence he was still sceptical.

"I admit, of course, that the weight of it is rather startling," he said slowly. "But it wasn't the doctor I picked up. I'd know him, even in the dark."

"I'm not so certain of that, Halliday. But I think Maggie Morrison would have."

"Meaning——?"

"That I don't believe she would have stopped that truck at night for anyone she didn't know. You have to consider the character of the girl, she was as timid as a rabbit about some things. Superstitious, too. I say she would have gone by, after your experience, unless she had a particular reason for stopping. And I still think she recognized this man, possibly by the lightning, which was practically incessant, and so she stopped."

"You're right in one thing, probably," he said. "She had a reason for stopping."

Jane has entirely recovered, and has today resumed work on her tapestry, with us a barometer of normality. She has even agreed to dine at the Livingstones tonight, not particularly to my delight.

"Come over and dine," Mrs. Livingstone telephoned, "and let's have a little bridge. I've had the horrors for three days."

"You don't object to my wearing my revolver, as a part of my evening outfit?"

"Everybody's doing it," she said. "This house has been turned into an arsenal."

But in the midst of death we are in life. Clara, going to turn down my bed last night, saw two feet projecting from beneath it, and let out a series of wild shrieks.

Needless to say, they were my boots, hastily discarded for a pair of dry ones. . . .

Later: Doctor Hayward stopped in this evening for a final professional visit to Jane and on an impulse I showed him Uncle Horace's letter. I may be mistaken, but it seemed to me that, under pretense of reading it a second time, he was playing for time.

"Curious!" he said, when he passed it back to me. "What do you make of it?"

"The last part of it is fairly clear. He was in danger, and knew it."

Analyzing the Doctor

"But the rest of it?" he said. "What does he say? The wickedness of the idea. What idea?"

"You haven't any opinion on that yourself?"

"No," he said slowly. "I can't say that I have.

The tension, or whatever it was, seemed to relax then. "As a matter

The tension, or whatevre it was, addressed o me, when I commenced it. We'd had a long argument not long before his death on euthanasia. I believed in putting the unfit out of the world; he didn't. But of course the end of it settles that."

He laughed again, bit the end of a thumb, hesitated, and then got his hat.

'Danger'," he said. "And the police! No that wasn't for me."

"And you still believe he died of heart disease?"

"It was his heart, all right," he said, and going out, climbed heavily into his car. He seemed abstracted, and made no reply to my good-night.

I can read into this what I like. His manner was not that of a guilty man; on the other hand, it was not entirely natural, either. He was both watchful and self-conscious. And I do not believe he read the letter twice.

One of the evening newspapers tonight prints a photostatic copy of the cipher found in our garage, and offers a prize for its solution.

Edith's memory is shown to have been faulty in only one particular. The cipher as published, reads:

Splendid Story of a Boston Girl of Today

the other. "I want to look nice, today."

This was not the first time that Merry Locke had had a man "on the brain," as Jinny called it.

She was not quite 17 years old the first time she fell in love. It was only puppy love that first time, of course. Only a silly boy-and-girl affair.

The boy was not much older than Merry, herself, was at that time.

His name was Lester Purcell and that year he was the high school hero. For he was not only captain of the football team, but he actually owned a small roadster, besides. Merry considered herself very lucky to be his best girl. She honestly wondered what he could see in her.

At that time she didn't know how pretty she was. She worried about her looks as most young things of 17 do worry about them.

She worried because her little nose turned up at the end, and because there were freckles on it.

The upturned nose was part of her gay charm, if she had only known it. Its saucy tilt matched, somehow, the merriment of her mouth and the laughter in her green, gold-flecked eyes.

Even the hated freckles were an ornament. For they were gold-colored and they blended with the raw gold of her hair and the old ivory tint of her skin.

There was something about Merry that made people think of happy sunny things when they looked at her.

She had been given the plain name of Mary Ann by her sponsors in baptism. But long ago Dad and Moms had nicknamed her "Merry." The name suited her to a T, and it had stuck.

One night when Merry was 17 Lester Purcell had taken her for a drive in his car, and out in the still darkness of the country he had kissed her.

"[illegible]-looking thing in shoe leather," smiled Merry, girl who thought that the Man in Gray was "it." Just then the Man in Gray walked nearer.

Her First Kiss

It was the first time she had ever been kissed in her life by any man except Dad. But she did not tell that to Lester Purcell—no, indeed! She wasn't going to let him think that she was a "baby." Goody-goody!

So she said to him, with her lips again his, "I love you."

She didn't, of course. She wasn't in love with him at all. What she was in love with was the way he made love to her. She was in love with Love!

That was three years ago—and Merry had forgotten even what Lester looked like now. It was just a name to her—"Lester Purcell, the first boy who ever kissed me." That was the way she thought about him.

The only thing about him that she didn't forget was that first kiss of his. It was the one and only thing that she remembered—the breathless, heart-pounding moment when his arms went around her and his mouth came down hard upon her's in the chill darkness of the night.

No woman ever forgets her first kiss—and Merry had not forgotten hers.

She had been kissed dozens of times since then by as many men.

A petting party was as much a part of Life's gay program as a swimming party or a picnic—to Merry Locke.

Love-making always seemed fresh and new to her—every kiss like the first kiss. The tingling of excitement along her nerves, the blood singing in her veins—these were part of the joy of being alive.

Only last night Derrick Jones, who lived next door, had tried to kiss her as they sat in the hammock couch out under the apple tree in the back yard. And Merry, bewitched by the new moon or by her own youth, perhaps, had cheerfully let him.

The dreadful part of it was that while he had been holding her close to him, Merry had been thinking not of Derrick, but of the Man in the Gray Suit.

It was while she was rinsing her hair that Moms banged loudly on the panels of the bath room door.

She Likes Men

"Mary Ann Locke! Whatever are you doing in there, all this time?" she called, rattling the doorknob angrily, "don't you realize that it's a quarter past eight? You're going to be late again. I declare, I don't know why I'm sending you to business college!"

"I don't know, either," Merry returned, under her breath. She threw a Turkish towel over her head to shut out the sound of her mother's voice, and began to rub her wet hair briskly.

She hated to go to business college as a matter of fact.

She broke all her pointed, shiny nails on the typewriter keys, and the very thought of writing shorthand all her life made her head ache.

But then she had to do something for a living, she supposed.

In an office a girl had a chance to meet men. Clean-cut men like the Man in the Gray Suit—the man she had met every day for a week among the noontide crowds of Washington street.

At the very thought of him, Merry's heart leaped and she began to hurry with her dressing. She would see him again—in just a few hours.

It was a quarter to nine before she walked into the kitchen of the small Arlington house where she had lived all her life.

Her hair was shining like spun gold, and she was as trim as a sea-going yacht in her clean linen dress and brown kid pumps.

"Here comes our soap-flakes beauty!" Helen, who was the oldest of the Locke girls, hailed her as she opened the door and sat down at the table with its shining white cloth and bubbling percolator.

Helen was the stay-at-home sister, The Cinderella of the family.

She was the only one of the four Locke sisters who was not pretty. She wasn't gay and colorful like Merry, or cute like boyish little Jinny. She had none of the dash and style of Cassie, the second oldest.

At twenty-seven Helen looked fully thirty with her thick short figure, and her hair that was the color known as "dirty blonde." She was always shabby, and looked as if she needed an hour alone with a good beauty doctor.

Two years ago Helen had given up school teaching as a bad job, and had settled down rather hopelessly to help Moms take care of the house.

All the meanest jobs had a way of falling to poor Helen. It was she who did the enormous weekly ironing, cleaned the gas stove, washed the dishes, peeled the vegetables, and gave the house its daily cleaning. The three other girls never so much as made their own beds.

This morning Helen was canning pineapple while Moms was out doing the marketing for the day. Moms loved to go to market. It gave her a chance to "get out for a breath of fresh air," and she met all her friends there, besides.

"There's no sugar in the bowl, Helen!" Merry said sharply as she poured herself a cup of coffee and dropped the morning paper up against the percolator.

Without a word Helen wiped her wet, red hands on her apron and filled the sugar bowl. When she set it down before her younger sister she laid a little square tissue-paper package on the cloth beside it.

"Many happy returns of the birthday, Merry," she said in a slow, heavy voice. Helen's voice dragged like her feet.

Fairly twinkling with pleasure Merry shook the package, felt it all over with her finger tips, and began to untie the violet ribbon that bound it.

"I bet I can guess what it is—a sachet to put in my handkerchief box!" she laughed as she opened it.

Her face fell. For the gift was nothing so frivolous as a sachet. It was a square of cheap black sateen, its edges bound in red tape.

She held it up and looked at it with puzzled eyes.

Talk of Marriage

"It's just as pretty as it can be, Helen," she faltered, "but what is it? What's it for?"

"Why, it's a dust cloth, of course! A dust cloth for your hope chest." Helen explained while a dull flush crept painfully under her pasty skin. "I made it for you. You don't like it, do you?"

It was only too plain to be seen that Merry was not at all thrilled by the sateen duster. She was looking at it as she often regarded her shorthand notebook or her hated typewriter down at the Boston business school.

"I love you for making it for me, Helen," she said, taking one of her sister's large rough hands in hers, "but what on earth would I do with a duster—or with a hope chest either?"

Helen drew her hand away and walked back to the sink.

"Why, I suppose you'll get married some day—just as we all hope to," she said then in that drawling voice of hers, "and you'll need a dust cloth or two, I've no doubt."

Merry shook her shining head once more. She folded up the piece of sateen, and turned around in her chair so that Helen could get the full force of what she was going to say.

"Let me tell you something, Helen!" Her little voice was hard and bright as plate glass. "I wouldn't marry the best man on earth if I had the chance. I've seen too much of married life right here in this house with Dad and Moms! If any fellow asks me to marry him, I'm going to give him the air! I'm going to tell him to go wrap himself up in the atmosphere! And it won't take me long to do it, either."

Helen frowned thoughtfully.

"Yes, Moms does nag Dad a lot," she said slowly, "but they get along pretty well, just the same. And let me ask you something. If you don't want to get married, why did you let Derrick Jones kiss you last night out in the swing?"

"He didn't." Merry fibbed instantly.

Helen shrugged her square shoulders. "I saw him do it," she answered bluntly, and Merry had the grace to blush.

"Oh, well, what if you did?" she asked, not meeting her sister's honest gray eyes, "that's nothing. He's been doing it off and on for the last couple of years. It doesn't mean anything."

"Then you shouldn't let him do it," began Helen, "if you don't care about him it's horrid to—"

"Oh, stop talking like a Bible class!" Merry flamed out at her, suddenly. "You've been a perfect lady all your life, and where have you got? No farther than the kitchen sink! You've listened to Moms' old fashioned ideas about getting yourself engaged to a man before you let him hold your hand for twenty-six years, and what have they done for you? Nothing! Absolutely nothing!"

"Is that so?"

"Why, of course, it's so!" Merry answered shrilly. "You're buried alive in this house, and you're so dead that you don't know it! What happened to that guy who used to come to see you, four or five years ago? [illegible] his name—[illegible] Harper." Helen [illegible] quietly. "He's living somewhere up in Canada—up in Manitoba. I used to hear from him. He wrote me three or four letters after he went away."

"Yes and if he'd had a few kisses to remember you by, he'd probably have come back and married you," said Merry. "If a man likes a girl, a little petting makes him all the crazier about her. Don't you know that?"

The point never was to be settled. For at that moment the front door slammed and Moms' quick step was heard in the hall.

Beatrice Burton's Latest and Best Fiction Work

At the sound, Merry jumped up from the table, and her startled eyes leaped to the clock above the sink.

"Heavens to Betsy!" she whispered, "it's ten after nine! Moms'll have a fit when she finds me still here."

Moms came to a dead stop in the kitchen doorway when she saw her, and a kind of despair came into her cold gray eyes. Her lips tightened into a narrow line, and she shook her head angrily.

"Well, your Dad will never be dead while you're alive, Merry Locke! You're just exactly like him!" she cried. "I've been trying to get him off to work on time for the last twenty-seven years, and I suppose I'm going to have the same thing with you for the next twenty-seven! Now, what do you mean sitting there killing time when you KNOW you ought to be down at that school this minute? What do you mean by it?"

Merry drew a long breath, and fluttered her long black lashes up and down demurely.

"I'm sorry, Moms," she said soothingly, "but I just couldn't wake up this morning. I guess I must have galloping Spring fever, or something."

Moms' eyes swept her up and down. "Spring fever, nothing!" she contradicted, "you've been washing your head, that's what! I wondered what you were doing so long in that bathroom! Now get your hat and get out! And don't try to tell me any more lies like that! Spring fever, indeed! You get up when I call you, hereafter! And if you want to wash that head of yours, you wash it at night. Do you hear me?"

"I'd be deaf if I didn't," Merry said to herself.

"Yes, Moms," she answered aloud.

"If you'd pay more attention to your studies and less to your silly hair, you'd be better off!" Moms went on, banging her market basket down on the table. "It took you five years to get through high school, boy crazy that you are! But if you don't 'tend to business now, I'm going to yank you out of that school. And there'll be no six ways about it either! I've spent enough time and money on you, my lady! Now don't answer me back! Right about face, and get out of this house!"

Merry went.

She was glad to escape from the kitchen, and the sound of her mother's voice.

"What a woman!" she sighed to herself, when she was out in Mystic street.

The sunshine made a golden halo of her fluffy hair. Two or three times on her way to the corner Merry opened her bag to look at herself in the little round mirror that was fastened in the top of it.

Finally she took off her hat and carried it in her hand. She knew that she was twice as pretty with her hair uncovered as she was when she had a hat on.

"I'll leave it off when I go out for my lunch today, too," she made up her mind her mind as she took the Massachusetts avenue car for Harvard square and Boston.

Dreams of Love

The man in the Gray Suit has never seen her hatless, of course. And if he thought she was worth looking at with that ugly little black straw helmet pulled down over her ears, what would he think of her when he saw her coming along with her hair shining and blowing in the sun like the crowning glory that it was? Merry's pulse began to quicken at the thought of today's noonday meeting.

"Funny thing that I'm so crazy about a man I don't know," she said to herself, as she sat at her desk an hour later and watched the hands of the clock sweep on toward the noon hour. "Just think—I've never heard him speak—I don't even know what his name is, or anything else about him. And yet I can hardly wait to see him every day of my life!"

She forgot all about the touch system she was trying to learn.

Her hands dropped from the keys of the typewriter and she stared out at the sky where the sunlit clouds were piling themselves up into silver-white froth. But she didn't see them.

She was picturing herself as she would look to the Man in the Gray Suit, when she met him on the street this noon.

"What would I do if he spoke to me?" she wondered.

Men had spoken to her on the street before. Men she didn't know. And she had pretended not to hear them and walked on with her little tip-tilted nose in the air, and her eyes straight ahead of her.

But this man—

"I'll make him speak to me!" she told herself suddenly.

For she knew, all at once, that he wasn't the kind of man who would ever speak to a girl he didn't know. There was something in his face, as she remembered it, that told her that.

Somebody nudged her, startling her out of her day dream.

"Twelve o'clock. Going to lunch?" asked the girl who sat next to her.

Her name was Nettie Something-or-other, and she was a coarse-looking girl who wore too much make-up and a loud, cheap-looking coat.

No—Merry wasn't going to let the Man in the Gray Suit see her with Nettie! Not this year!

"No, thanks, Nettie," she said sweetly. "I'm not going out this noon. I have a headache."

Nettie got up. "All right," she answered.

As soon as she was gone, Merry flew to the dressing room.

It was empty, and she had the long mirror to herself.

She fluffed up her hair and smiled at her reflected self with her black-lashed green eyes, trying to see herself as she would look to the Man in the Gray Suit.

She dallied there so long that it was twenty minutes after twelve when she went out into crowded Boylston street.

"Jiminy Christmas," she thought standing in the doorway of the building, "I hope I haven't missed him."

And just then she saw him coming toward her, along the crowded pavement! He walked near her.

Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

HERE was Jim's wife [illegible] driving Nick about [illegible] in the car which had just been advertised as the joint property of the artist and her brother.

"You and your husband—Dalton—must come over and have dinner with him and Anne and me," said Nicholas Petry easily. "And [illegible] Madam Jeanie, we'll tell [illegible] about how chummy we've got[illegible]. Au 'voir if you must go—and I suppose you really must if your friend is to make her rehearsal—"

"And if you're to finish your tete-a-tete before you have to drive home and join Jim," said Lucie sweetly—too sweetly by far.

"The acidulous little lemondrop!" laughed Nicholas Perry after they were gone. "She was actually insinuating that Jim is silly to let you go driving about alone with me. She little knows how much you detest me. So [illegible]—"

"In the way you most like to be flattered," I said quietly. "I wonder, Mr. Perry, if you understand yourself as well as I understand you."

"So you understand me, fair one," laughed Mr. Perry. "I thought you did a few moments since when you inadvertently called me 'Nick.' By the way, was it inadvertent?"

"I don't know," I replied honestly.

"Did you do it to show Jeanie——" began Mr. Perry and stopped suggestively.

"To show Jeanie what?" I asked, falling into the trap set for me.

"Off with the old love and on with the new," hummed Mr. Perry in a manner just a shade this side of offensive.

My blood rose. But I knew better than to show this cynical, inconsequent fellow that he could annoy me with what he was bound to insist was humor, if I let myself be foolish enough to stress it.

"Don't be silly," I said, lightly. "Jeanie knows me well enough to be sure that I wouldn't call a man by his first name in order to show her that I want to succeed her in his casual and fickle affections."

"Straight from the shoulder — ha?" laughed Mr. Perry. "Well, I'll say this for you — the chap who manages to flirt with Jim Harrison's wife probably will have to do it when she's under the influence of laughing gas, or under the influence of jealousy induced by Jim's roving eye."

And [illegible] easily.

Mr. Perry flushed. I [illegible] scored. But I felt sure [illegible] I am compelled [illegible] society of this [illegible] man, whose [illegible]

And all the way home I [illegible] myself wondering [illegible] Nicholas Perry insist on having [illegible] farmhouse because [illegible] car turning in there? Was he using me to impress Jeanie or is he playing a deeper, more subtle game than that?

At dinner time I told Jim about the affair of the farm house tearoom and the way Nicholas Perry had staged a meeting with Jeanie. When I had finished my recital, which included an account of Lucie Tre[illegible] [illegible] at me with twinkling eyes and twitching lips as he asked:

"Who'd have thought old Pe[illegible] so clever?"

"Clever?" I repeated.

"Calling Lucie 'an acidulous little lemon drop' is—colorful to say the least," insisted Jim.

"Oh—coining phrases!" I said scornfully. "Everyone does that nowadays. You're not going to sit and admire Nicholas Perry for juggling words, I hope."

"What do you want me to do?"

"I don't know," I confessed. "But I don't like to find myself in situations where Lucie can give me digs such as that one. I hate having a woman of her type insinuate that I'm sneaking off to tea with another man and that I'm under the unfortunate necessity of going home to you. It—belittles us both."

"Not unless you let it," Jim said dryly.

I stared at him in amazement, trying to estimate his mental processes.

"Don't goggle your eyes," Jim cried without losing his twinkle. "Surely you realize that having Lucie insinuate that you're flirting with Perry doesn't make it so."

"Don't you hate having her insinuate things?" I urged.

"She's not important enough to consider."

Dr. Reed on Eugenics

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU are naturally interested in the science of being well born, otherwise called Eugenics.

It won't make much difference to you or to your children already born for both are accomplished facts. But a little timely education may make a vast difference to your grandchildren.

Remember that the principles of evolution which have been demonstrated in the laboratory by work on plants and animals apply equally to mankind.

The study of eugenics grew out of the study of evolution.

The principal business of eugenics is to determine the processes and laws of human heredity and the fortunes of family stocks and races.

One of the first tasks of eugenics is to investigate the manner of the inheritance of human traits.

The Eugenics Record Office at Coldstream Harbor, Long Island, has analysed many pedigrees of human families and studied very closely more than 164 different human traits. Many of these follow definite rules of inheritance, but others are simply known to "run in families."

If we had sufficient data on heredity, mate selection, differential fecundity, differential survival and differential migration, says H. H. Laughlin, we could predict what is happening to the human race and gauge what sort of stocks, families and national numbers we should have in time.

Mate selection is a particularly important factor. It is extremely d[illegible] [illegible] especially to suggest the practical application of the study. People m[illegible] because they fall in love a[illegible] continue to do so, but the other reasons for falling in [illegible] sides simply the process of "fa[illegible]. Education, manners, [illegible] cial position, wealth [illegible]

The statutory laws the [illegible] marriage and divorce apply [illegible] to mate selection, and [illegible] riage laws are changed [illegible] will be [illegible] mate selection. If this [illegible] eugenical factor can be controlled [illegible] others, although equally important would be found subordinate to it.

Eugenics, however, would not be a practical thing unless the most valuable matings had a high fertility and the least valuable had a low fertility. If we could recruit the next generation from the upper classes, the race would make very great progress.

The application of differential fecundity is extremely embarrassing at times branches of a fertile family that rise in the social scale seem to become less fertile.

The farming population of the United States, which is 30 per cent. of the whole, has recruited 84 per cent. of the next generation. The eugenic importance of this fact is fundamental.

Classification in eugenics is based upon the ability of particular stocks to function as socially valuable units and to reproduce themselves in proportion to their race values.

Up at nine of the clock, which is the hour I am now resolved to rise at, and sit past noontide twiddling of thumbs. Lord; never in my life hath felt so molly-colly, which, methinks, come from guttling of pickled herring with hot chocolate sauce. Anon to the printery and caudge-paw at my stint. At night meet with merrie companie, to wit Lady Beatrice Van, the scrivener, Sir James Gruen, the nimble-wit; Milord Edwin Justice Mayer, who did concoct "Firebrand" for play-acting; Mister Al Lewin, the pundit, Mister George O'Hara, the cherry merry mume, and Sir Frederick Newmeyer, the gagster. And did hear some brave musique sung without book, and methinks "In the Baggage Car Ahead" is as chopfallen a song as ever I hear. So home and to bed

FOXY GRANDPA'S INTERESTING DAILY BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

O[illegible]

[illegible] coming up [illegible] the [illegible] I think it [illegible] there. And [illegible] down into the garden to [illegible] that [illegible] hanging over [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] how [illegible] it would be if we [illegible] He wondered if we could ever train any [illegible] to [illegible] there and keep [illegible] with us. [illegible] have to change its position [illegible] family looking very wise, [illegible] any peace and quiet [illegible] it might live in that [illegible]

"[illegible]" asked Bobby, quickly [illegible]

[illegible] a little disturber around here, and she might even eat up any eggs that they might have."

I became interested myself and asked

"To whom do you refer, Bunny?"

"Haven't you seen the little mouse that lives somewhere around this fireplace?" he asked

Neither Bobby nor I had seen the mouse, and it was not until Spring that we did. Then something happened

Again I was sitting on the porch waiting for Bobby to come home and pretty soon I saw him walking slowly along the road. I knew again this time that he was carrying something very carefully in his little hands. He edged in through the gate and walked up the path as if he were walking on eggs.

"Now, what is it this time, Bobby?" I laughed.

Bobby didn't say a word, but just opened his little hand, and there, what do you think he was holding? Two dear little baby robins!

The babies were so young that they hardly had any feathers at all. In fact, they looked almost naked

"The poor little things!" I exclaimed. "Where did you find them?"

"Foxy Grandpa," answered Bobby, and his voice sounded very much as if he had a big lump in his throat which he could not swallow. "I found them on the ground. They must have fallen out of their nest. I didn't see a sign of their father or mother. I hunted all over for their nest, but couldn't find it. So I thought the best thing to do was to bring them home."

"You were exactly right, Bobby," I said, patting his curly fair head

"Can't we put him in our nest?"

"The very place for them," I said and started in to the house. I took the babies in my hand to keep them warm, while Bobby climbed up on a chair to get down the [illegible] nest. Bunny had already run out in the yard to dig up some worms for our little orphans

When Bobby took the nest in his hands and looked at it I thought his big blue eyes would pop right out of his head. He simply held the nest toward me. He couldn't speak and no wonder!

Because, there curled up as cozy as you please in the birds' nest was a little mother mouse, and nestled close to her were four babies which were so small you couldn't believe they were alive.

"We can't disturb that family," I laughed, putting the nest back up in its twig. "Get a box with some cotton, Bobby. We'll have to build a nest ourselves for these other babies."

The little robins grew fat and strong, and as soon as they were able to fly we turned them out on the lawn and away they flew. I'm quite sure by now they have found their mother and father and are all living happily together.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

VACATION time is here and people who have done nothing all Winter are going to continue doing it this Summer.

THEY loaf half the year and rest the other half.

EVEN Sitting Bull used to take a vacation every June and stand up for two weeks.

WHEN he was young he sat down for three years without taking a day off.

IF he had any loafing to do he always did it himself.

HE was so ambitious that he wouldn't get anybody to help him.

THERE'S a clerk in Brockton who's so lazy that he pays a man [illegible] a month to watch the clock for him.

HE got St. Vitus' dance once but he was too lazy to shake.

HE tried to exchange it for rheumatism so that he wouldn't have to move.

HIS idea of a busy life was timing a century plant with a stop-watch.

ONCE when he was forced to go to work he tried to get a job selling roller skates in the Old People's Home.

HE was tickled to death while demonstrating skates because he liked a job where he could sit down.

THIS kind of work kept him off his feet most of the time.

AFTER he lost that position he got a job advertising mattresses. He used to show people how long you could lie down on one of them without wearing it out.

HE kept this job quite a while because the boss couldn't wake him up long enough to fire him.

AND it isn't fair to can a man in his sleep.

HOWEVER, he even got tired of this job and after lying flat on his back for six months he changed his position.

DAILY SHORT STORY -:- -:- -:- A FACTUAL FANTASY

By Jack Woodford

THE milk of human kindness can be very full of whey on a gray day in New York when one is out of a job.

Grayce Howard leaned wearily against the side of the elevator as she shot down with sickening speed from the eighteenth floor of a large building which contained the last potentiality in the shape of an agent who sometimes, but not often, had chorus openings.

She went over to the drinking fountain and took a large drink. Water, for a time, will keep the stomach, when empty, from working upon itself, and giving one that little disagreeable hot feeling as it works. Grace had not breakfasted, neither had she lunched, and though it was 3 o'clock Grayce had no intention of dining.

With a little catchy laugh that was not far from the tear zone she remembered that always before, with her, the horrible sort of blackness which surrounded her now usually portended a sudden break of good luck—but it seemed impossible this time.

She passed through the swinging doors and out upon Broadway, feeling very dizzy and helpless.

Broadway alight with a million impishly dancing lights; lights that swirled and eddied about dizzingly; Broadway of many moods. A street that can be a bright-eyed mistress welcoming with open arms, or a or a taunting, leering demon stabbing with a thousand daggers of sharp light.

She turned into a side street and walked toward a subway entrance. Her last remaining nickel would go for a place to sit down for a few moments; a place to soak up a little warmth.

Her heart contracted in a sharp spasm of fright as she remembered that the virago who owned the ramshackle dump on Sixty-seventh street had told her that she would not be admitted that night unless she had at least a partial payment on the back rent due.

On the train she cuddled up in the corner a slim, woeful little bundle with dark rings under heavy, hopeless eyes, for at twenty-one, one can be very hopeless indeed if one be hopeless at all.

After fifteen or twenty minutes of riding Grayce felt a return of the car sickness which had assailed her when hungry. She got out of the train and going up the street started aimlessly to walk.

Half deliriously as she passed open windows, at nearly the street level, with engaging floor lamps redly abright within, she smiled appreciatively at the half disclosed scenes of warmth and presumable happiness within. Someone to care for her . . . just a little . . . . what a glorious thought! It sustained her until she reached a small park and sank down upon a bench, to cry softly and hopelessly in the dark.

With the tears the thoughts that she had been thrusting away came sneaking back. To have gone an entire day without food was bad, but to realize that one had no prospects for food upon the morrow. And no place to sleep that night. With a little hysterical laugh she thought of the many stories she had read of girls in such positions being suddenly confronted by a tremendously handsome and wealthy youth with matrimony held in his mind as an almost insanely insistent passion. Stories where fat men with money suddenly appeared and offered glorious apartments, beautiful clothes, rich viands—and themselves. Stories where honest youths appeared also penurious and offered to divide their last remaining dolar, where upon romance began immediately to weave and working side by side the two finally achieve—everything—and usually a baby or two to boot. What rot, what romantic sentimental rubbish thought Grayce. And yet if it were only true. If life could only be even one tenth as easy to live as fiction would have it be.

Finally the inquisitive little gusts of wind began to find Grayce's tender flesh right through the texture of her clothing, and while wiling if necessary, to have her soft, pink flesh kissed, Grayce did not fancy that kind of kisses—she rose wearily and walked on, totally indifferent to direction. Her feet pained her. Her eyeballs hurt and her head ached woefully. Her hands were half numb from lack of circulation and her stomach was again mking those little hot, stabby pains as the walls worked upon each other.

She walked along a street occasionally lighted by shop windows until the careless, hard eyes of the few passers-by began to be more than she could bear. And presently coming to an opening in the street, and regretting even the necessary expenditure of energy which would be required to mount the opposite curb, she turned, almost unwittingly into an alley. For a few moments she wandered, feeling faint and giddy. That she would drop soon now Grayce was beginning to be aware. The thought comforted her; when one actually dropped from one's feet, then, and only then would humanity assert itself. She would be taken somewhere and fed and put into a bed of sorts. She turned, blindly, unmindful of the necessity of getting out into the open where people would see her when she fell and not let her lie long on the deadly cold of the cement.

Finding an opening between houses she groped blindly along it in the pitch dark. She was lost in a maze of houses and crooked little byways she realized and unable to go more than a few feet further. She began to feel an unnatural warmth and an unreasonable floating feeling and knew that it was but a matter of seconds now before she would drop.

Suddenly she ran into a barrier and leaned upon it. Her groping hands traveled over the surface and found a hasp and padlock. With an anguished wrench Grayce expended her last ounce of strength in a savage jerk upon the lock, and strangely enough, being rusty of springs from the many rains which had fallen upon it it gave way. Frantically she jerked it out of the hasp and threw it away and, with the hasp for a handle, pulled open the door.

A blinding gust of bright light greeted her from within; and, for a moment, she stood with arm thrown across her eyes. Gradually she lowered her arm and through a blur she began to make out objects.

At first she was quite sure that she had fainted, or died, or gone insane; for, aparently, before her, was a beautifully furnished little bedroom. She forgot her hunger as her eyes rested upon the snowy covers of the delectable little bed. It was intoxicatingly warm, unnaturally warm, within, and a little electric grate glowed invitingly. The room was furnished to the ultimate; a litil table and reading lamp beside the bed, a dressing table littered with glass and silver articles of the feminine toilette; it was such a room as Grayce had often dreamed of.

As she looked through swollen eyes that saw but dimly all of this she tore at her clothing and succeeded in removing all of it except her pink and frilly underwear. Where is the woman who, though, perhaps rather the worse for wear in her outer apparel does not yet manage somehow to achieve daintiness in her underwear? Half fainting Grayce threw herself upon the bed and drew the soft covers over her aching form.

Instantly a strong hand seized her and a gruff voice began to yell: "Wake up, wake up—what the hell's the matter with you?"

Grayce struggled painfully back to consciousness. With astonishment she observed that it was suddenly broad daylight and the artificial lights in the room were out.

Forgetful of her dishabille she started to climb from the bed upon observing the angry lokoing policeman gazing austerely down at her.

As she did so a strange sound greeted her ears. It was as though Niagara had suddenly changed its course and started to flow through New York, just outside of that room.

"Hey!" expostulated the cop. "For God's sake, get back into that bed again and pull them covers back up over you!" Wonderingly Grayce did so, and it was while she was pulling the covers back that she happened to look before her. A frightened gasp escaped her, and she screamed in terror, for she had looked through a plate glass window into a sea of million faces, most of them cheering and clapping.

The papers were full of it. It was the joke of the hour in New York. Every paper in the city had obtained pictures of the thing and Grayce's complete story.

At the police station she ate the most gorgeous meal she had ever eaten in her life, bologna sausage and rye bread, and cup after cup of strong, black coffee. It was with a little moue that she paused long enough to interview a visitor announced by a genial faced cop.

"Name is Henty," announced the caller. "Your climbing into that sign by accident last night was the biggest piece of publicity we've ever had. I'm vice president of the firm that maintains it. You see we built that room there behind that sign and furnish it up different every week. One week it's a parlor, then a living room, a man's den, an you happen to strike it just at the right time when it was a lady's boudoir. The picture of it and our firm name is on the first page of every paper in New York. We wouldn't dare, of course, send a lady in there to sleep, but your having stumbled upon it has netted us invaluable advertising. Here's a check for a thousand even."

Absently Grace took the check and tucked it into her blouse; absently she interviewed the representative from a New York show who tendered her a pretty figured contract for the rest of the season. Absently she listened to the police captain tell her that they had checked up on her story and found it true and that she was free to go—for she was far too much interested in the bolonga and rye bread to pay much attention to such petty details.

BOSTON HAS A RADIO BROKER

Boston has produced what is believed to be the first "radio broker."

His name is John Shepard 3rd, and here's what he has done to qualify for the title:

He has made arrangements to take over on June first the entire booking of commercial programs for WLWL, the 5000-watt broadcasting station of the Paulist Fathers in New York City.

WLWL may shortly be linked up with both WNAC and WEAN, making the third largest radio chain in the country. This hookup will give Boston fans an opportunity to enjoy special programs, including the famous Paulist Choir, hitherto possible only to those living within reliable receiving range of New York City.

Mr. Shepard is prominent in broadcast circles, having been identified with the art for over three years, WNAC being one of the five first Western Electric installations in the country. An office will be established by Mr. Shepard at the WLWL studios in New York City.

SPAIN EXPECTED TO RESIGN FROM LEAGUE

London, June 14—The possibility that Spain may make good her threat to quit the League of Nations and subsequently form a "Spanish-speaking league" in conjunction with South and Central American nations is suggested in the Sunday Express.

Pictures by Radio

Moscow, June 14.—The Russian inventor, Trenor, has constructed an apparatus which he claims will permit instantaneous transmission of pictures by radio.

Radio Queries

Q.—O. O. A., East Braintree. I have a one tube Greene set, which has recently stopped working. I used to be able to get squeals on it, but now all I get is scratchy noises, and the local stations very faintly. Can you help me through the Radio Queries? Set uses a WD11 tube.

A.—From your description of things, it would appear that your B battery had run down. Try a new B battery (unless you have already done this) and then have the tube tested for sensitiveness.

Q.—L. K., Revere. I have several radio tubes which were brought over from France, immediately after the Armistice in 1918. These all light O. K., and I was wondering if they could be used in a set. Is there any adapter which will make them fit a standard socket?

A.—There were several types of tubes then in use. Some of the French tubes were very good, but I would not regard them as up to the present day American tubes in efficiency. My advice would be to not bother with them, as it would mean too much fooling around, with questionable results.

Q.—F. H. C., Dedham. Can you tell me if there is a C battery made for the UX171 power amplifying tube? If there is not, how can I get a voltage of 40½?

A.—I know of no special C battery which is made for this tube. Your best stunt would be to use one of the small 22½ volt blocks in series with one of the larger 22½ volt blocks which has the taps on it. Tap off this second battery at 18 volts, and you will have your 40½, as specified for the tube.

Q.—M. McS., East Boston. Where is station WAMD?

A.—WAMD is a 244 meter station at Minneapolis, Minn.

Q.—T. M. W., Lowell. I was tuning in with my set one night recently and heard a station testing. He gave his call letters as "1XAE." Can you tell me who it was? Also can you tell me why I get WNAC all over the dial, and a couple of other stations the same way? The set is a two-tube built-up Workright.

A.—1XAE is the experimental call signal of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company's station at Springfield, Mass. The station normally uses WBZ for a call letter, except when testing. In answer to your second question, I presume your set incorporates the regenerative hookup. If this is so, and you are using a three-circuit tuner, it is more than likely that the aerial circuit is working on a "dead" spot right in the vicinity of WNAC's wave. Try inserting a .00025 M. F. fixed condenser in series with the aerial. I think this will eliminate your trouble completely. For receiving on the longer waves (over 400 meters), you may remove the condenser.

Radio Influence

Radio seems to be influencing many other industries and the word itself is entering into many sidelines of trade and commerce. We now find many new trade marks employing the word "radio" to attract and identify different substances or products. "Radio" with a design of a listener-in is used in a recent trade mark for shoe laces. It is also carried as the trade name of a certain brand of steel wool. There are also radio golf balls and several other objects listed today.

FERRERO SEES WAR AS LOSS TO ALL

civil wars ceased. The Empire made peace with the other States and with itself, because the old means of financing wars no longer existed.

Another notable example of the displacement of precious metals is furnished by the wars of the French revolution and the Empire. These wars deflected a considerable part of Europe's gold and silver toward France, and a considerable portion of the gold and silver of other continents towards England.

SCARCITY OF MONEY

Between 1815 and 1848 France appeared to the Italians and Germans a country gorged with precious metals. One fact which struck more than one Italian traveler in France in those days was the large number of people who possessed gold or silver watches—for to own even a silver watch was in Italy at that time the sign and privilege of those only who possessed considerable wealth.

Rare as was gold and silver at that time in the form of artistic objects, it was no less rare as specie.

The reconstruction of the stocks of money, which had become attenuated owing to the wars at the beginning of the century, was in Italy and Germany one of the hardest tasks which the generation that lived between 1815 and 1848 had to face. Those thirty-three years were hard and poverty-stricken ones for both countries.

The dislocation of the stocks of money which we have witnessed in these latter years is not a new thing. All great wars have taken the gold and silver of one people to give it to another. There is, however, a difference between our epoch and the preceding ones which has a certain importance. In former times the precious metals passed from the conquered to the conquerors. Today it appears that they have passed from the belligerents, victors and vanquished alike, to the spectators.

EUROPE'S DIFFICULTIES

There is no need to insist on the importance of that difference. It allows us to cut the interminable discussion between two extreme doctrines. Pacifism, according to which war must always be a bad business for every one, victors and conquered alike, and advocacy of war, who maintain that a victorious war is always an excellent business, and indeed a most lucrative one.

There are times when war may be a fruitful operation for the victors. Such as when, with a numerically small army, whose arms are simple and inexpensive, it is possible with little trouble to seize large quantities of movable possessions, especially metals and precious articles, the value of which is high in proportion to the expense necessary to arm and feed the soldiers of which the army is composed.

These conditions are found from time to time, sometimes in one country and sometimes in another.

But it would be in vain to look for conditions by which the operations of war might be made lucrative in our day.

Victory may give moral satisfaction and political advantages, but they are dearly bought.

VORENBERG IN NEW CHAIN

Vorenberg & Co., New England's newest chain store system, made its bow today.

In launching the new organization which opened units this morning at Worcester and Hartford, Felix Vorenberg climaxes a career of nearly forty years as a leading downtown Boston retailer.

Felix Vorenberg

The new chain is the outgrowth of his well known store at No. 13 Winter street retailing popular priced imported novelties.

The Vorenberg & Co. chain stores carry a complete line of imported novelties, enabling customers to select gifts for any occasion and offer quality merchandise at prices which give the public the benefit of direct importations.

The Hartford store is located at No. 88 Pratt street; the Worcester store at No. 410 Main street. To celebrate the launching of the new concern, special values are offered at each of its three stores.

Negotiations regarding the opening of two other stores are practically completed and ultimately the chain will have units in all important New England communities.

Felix Vorenberg is president of the system which actually had its start 37 years ago when he opened his Winter street store. As a merchant he has always been noted for his faith in the growth and prosperity not only of Boston but of all New England and for his active participation in civic movements planned to advance the interests of Boston and New England.

Colonel George F. Graham is general manager of the system.

SPRINGFIELD BOY TO DELIVER VALEDICTORY

Washington, D. C., June 14.—James Lawrence Garvin of Springfield, Mass., member of the graduating class at the the Catholic University here, has been selected to deliver the valedictory address at the commencement exercises next Wednesday. Four hundred degrees will be conferred, the largest in the history of the university at this, its 37th annual commencement.

FINANCE

By B. C. FORBES

Instead of the backward Summer trend in business which was freely predicted, a forward movement has set in. The security markets reflect expectation of satisfactory conditions during coming months.

Pessimists havt found a new theme. They have begun to harp upon the coming elections. The radical Brookhart's primary victory in Iowa, they loudly declare, is an unmistakable sympton of dissatisfaction throughtout the agricultural states over the Coolidge administration's attitude towards farm relief. Democratic victories are cocksuredly predicted. "Then watch out for tariff fireworks," they shout.

My own wanderings over the land met far more commendation than condemnation of Coolidge. More. Throughout the South I sensed a significant change in sentiment towards the tariff. The South is becoming industrial and has vigorous ambitions to set up and and develop many great, strong industries. Therefore, the South is not clamoring for free trade or anything approaching free trade.

Of course, politics logically will come more to the front as November approaches and both business and securities may be more or less effected thereby, but, in my opinion, neither business nor securities will suffer any real injury.

Meanwhile the great majority of developments are favorable.

Baank reserves tthroughout the cooountry and in New York have risen impressively and nothing is within sight to stiffen the low money rates now ruling.

The latest car loading are the heaviest ever recorded at this season, and increased efficiency, facilitated by liberal expenditures during recent years, its improving profits.

The demand for aautomobiles has exceeded even the most optimistic hopes of the idustry's leaders, so that production is being continued on a scale beyond previous calculations.

The decrease in the steel corporation's unfilled orders during May was the lowest recorded in that month during recent years and was less than half the decrease experienced during April. Consequently, chetrfulness reigns.

Notwithstanding the sagging tendency in the cost of living, the wage rend has been modestly upwards, a fact of fundamental economic significance.

An astounding number of companies are anouncing larger dividends, dtspite the widespread complaint that profit margins are awkwardly narrow.

Consumption of electric power and light, a fairly trustworthy yardstick for measuring general activity, is running well ahead of a year ago.

Whether the proverbial mid-Summer weakness will develop is uncertain, but it can be said that sentiment has become emphatically more hopeful during the last few weeks—despite uneasiness in high banking circles over the precarious position of French finances. The majority belief now is that the business barometer is more likely to rise than to fall.

WAGES FAIRLY WELL STABILIZED IN U. S.

Indications that wages have become fairly well stabilised is noted in statement issued by National Industrial Conference Board, an organization of employers. Ten years ending with 1925 have seen more violent wage fluctuations than have ever occurred in history of United States, report says, but recently wages have resumed their normal trend. As far as immediate future is concerned, board says, such wage changes as will occur are likely to be localized and sporadic, without greatly disturbing the general trend, which has been gradually upward since 1840, earliest date for which detailed records are available.

COTTON CONSUMPTION FOR MONTH IS LOWER

Washington, June 14 (A.P.).—Cotton consumed during May totalled 516,758 bales of lint and 59,754 of linters, compared with 576,799 of lint and 61,952 of linters in April this year and 531,668 of lint and 61,272 during May last year, the census bureau announced today.

OUTPUT OF COPPER MINES IS INCREASED

New York, June 14 (A.P.).—Copper mines in United States produced 147,302 pounds in May, increase of 894,000 pounds over April, and for the first five months this year the output rose to 723,980,000 pounds, compared with 719,796,000 in like period of 1925.

New York Curb

New York, June 14 (I.N.S.).—Fractional advances and declines were scored in the Curb market today, while industrial stocks headed the activity. Swift International was down ⅛ at 18¼; Ford Motor of Canada 490, down 4; Lehigh Power unchanged at 15⅛; General Baking B 6⅝, up ⅛; International Petroleum 34¼, up ⅛; and Continental Baking B up ⅛ at 11⅝.

State Street Notes

QUINCY Market Cold Storage & Warehouse Company of Boston planning four-story power plant to cost $1,000,000.

EASTERN Steamship Lines, Inc., reports for April deficit after all deductions of $115,553, compared with deficit of $66,687 in April, 1925.

EASTERNS defirit of $374,251 is reported for four months to April 30, compared with deficit of $251,528 for same four months of 1925.

Grains Are Easier

Chicago, June 14 (I.N.S.).—Grains were a shade easier today with wheat ⅜ to 1 cent lower, corn ⅛ to ⅜ cents down, and oats 1 to 1⅛ cents lower.

Franc at New Low

Paris, June 14 (A.P.).—French franc today tumbled to a new low record for all time, reaching 36.57 to the pound sterling.

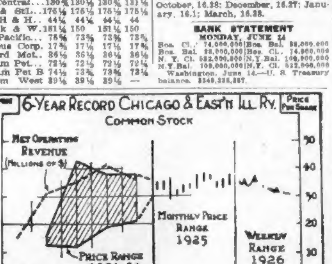
Washington, June 14.—U. S. Treasury balance, $340,235,257.



Chicago & Eastern Illinois Ry. Company, which was reorganized in 1920, operates nearly 1,000 miles of road extending southward from Chicago. As a result of the reorganization about 200 miles of the least productive trackage and properties were eliminated from the company's holdings.

At the present time the principal commodity carried is soft coal, although manufactured goods and miscellaneous freight account for about one-fifth of the total.

Chicago & Eastern has only just about kept pace with developments in its territory, and it has generally been considered that a consolidation with one of the larger systems would prove of benefit.

There was some talk at one time that this road might be linked with the Missouri-Pacific system since it would afford that system a valuable entrance into Chicago. It was also rumored at one time that the Pennsylvania Railroad was trying to secure control over this road.

During the past nine years total operating revenues have shown very little increase.

Net operating returns have made a little better record although net income after payment of all expenses has been unsatisfactory, how unsatisfactory may be seen from the fact that the new company has declared no dividends on either the preferred or common stock up to the present time.

HOW TO TREAT HOLDERS OF STOCKS

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

How should stockholders be treated? More and more the fact is coming to be realized that they ought to be accorded consideration. Professor W. Z. Ripley of Harvard started the ball rolling with his war on the issuance of non voting issues, at which the New York Stock Exchange stood up and took due notice.

President E. H. H. Simmons next came to bat with his declaration in favor of the issuance of more frequent earnings statements, previously noted in this column.

Then President F. Edson White of Armour & Company was lauded for his frank statement to stockholders, in the course of which he declared losses should not be concealed. We believe it ought not to escape attention that President Matt B. Jones of New England Telephone issued frank and frequent statements regarding that company during its critical days a few months ago, and finally gave a long advance notice of the time when dividends would be resumed.

Wholesale commodity prices were featured last week by a firmer undertone, 45 of the 68 changes that appear in the list of quotations collected by Dun's Review being advances, against 23 declines. This compares with 35 recessions and 37 increases in the previous week, and 22 advances and 25 reductions for the like week of last year.

Active buying, resulting largely from somewhat unfavorable reports regarding the condition of the Winter and Spring crops, caused a rather sharp rise in wheat this week and the strength of this cereal, together with a good cash demand, caused more or less advance in corn, oats, rye and barley. Live meats were in steady demand and prices tended upward on beef, hogs and sheep. Provisions were active and strong, reflecting the improvement in the raw material. Receipts of dairy products were fairly liberal, but, as consumptive demand was well maintained, the more desirable grades of butter, cheese and eggs showed moderate gains.

Wall Street Gossip

RETAIL sales by General Motors dealers to the public were 141,651 cars in May, compared with 136,643 in April and 106,051 in March.

SALES of National Cloak & Suit in May declined to $2,694,280 compared with $2,812,615 in May last year.

OIL STOCKS were today's best actors on the upside.

BELATED profit taking, which failed to appear at the week-end, developed at the opening of today's stock market, causing confusion of price movements.

Foreign Exchanges

Foreign exchange was lower. Sterling cables $4.86⅝, off $0.00⅛; French francs $0.0282, off $0.0010½; lire $0.0355, off $0.0008⅛.

CONNIE HOWARD JOINS MOVIE COLONY

Former Broadway Actress Plays Opposite Doug McLean in 'Ladies First'

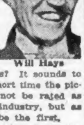
By LUELLA O. PARSONS.

LOS ANGELES, June 14.—Frances Howard Goldwyn had her first chance in the movies with Famous Players-Lasky and what a natural thing her sister, Constance, should start with the same company.

Constance who is blonde, slim and pretty enough to be a promising bet as a motion picture actress, will play opposite Douglas McLean in "Ladies First." I do not know when I have heard a piece of news I consider so interesting. For five years Miss Howard has been on the stage in New York. Figure it out for yourself. She must have been about thirteen when she made her stage debut since she is only eighteen now.

What I started to say is this: Connie came to the Golden West, taking Horace Greeley's advice literally, to make her fame and fortune. With Samuel Goldwyn for a brother-in-law you might think that is easy. But Connie wanted to start on her own and that is just what she is doing.

FIGURES to me are always the dullest things in the World, and, yet, after a conversation with Fred Beetson, head of the Hays' organization in Hollywood, any one must be impressed with the business the motion picture industry did in 1925. The paid-in admission of 20,233 theatres in America were over $520,000,000. Does that sound to you as if the World is getting tired of going to the movies? It sounds to me as if within a short time the picture business will not be rated as the fourth largest industry, but as the second or maybe the first.



Will Hays

The film rentals taken in by the Hays organization and by film rentals, I mean the amount of money paid by the exhibitors to the producers, amounted to something like $93,500,000 last year.

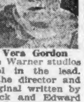
Speaking of the Hays' organization, Will Hays is due here June 20, on his annual visit.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE has left for New York. Of course her husband, Captain Alastair McIntosh, went with her. They sail from New York on the Berengaria the 23d, but Connie needs a few days in the old town to get some new clothes and have a look at the plays on Broadway. One would naturally think she would be thrilled at the prospect of a trip abroad, but not Connie. She says she just hates to leave Hollywood. I am afraid that is the way it strikes all of us.

Constance Talmage.

I SHOULD say if my opinion is asked that one move in favor of "What Price Glory," is having Ralph Spence write the titles. With a choice collection of swear words in the dialogue and the snappy conversation used, it needs a master hand to give the words to the movie. Spence has just that touch. I discovered it first when he wrote the titles for "The Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," and later when I saw "The Gorilla."

WITH the present popularity of Jewish-Irish pictures Vera Gordon has difficulty in fulfilling her engagements. Ever since she established herself as a character actress of Jewish roles in "Humoresque," she has had hundreds of offers to portray the same type of character. Her latest assignment is in "Private Izzy Murphy" which is being made at the Warner studios with George Jessel in the lead. Chuck Reisner is the director and the story is an original written by Raymond L. Schrock and Edward Clark with Phillip Lonergan writing the scenario. All of which reminds me that Ann Nichols has a suit against Universal for alleged piracy that, I am told, is the word used in the complaint which is still pending. The suit is based on the alleged resemblance of "The Cohans and Kellys" to "Abie's Irish Rose."



Vera Gordon

SOMETIMES I get dizzy keeping track of well known stars and directors. Here we have Harry D'Abbie D'Arrast, assistant director to Charles Chaplin, signing a contract with Famous Players-Lasky. Harry, only a few days ago, was on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, but it seems B. P. Schulberg has had his eye on the young man for a long time, with the consequence that when Mr. D'Arrast makes his next picture it will not be with the trade mark of the lion head, but with that of F. P. L. Schulberg.

HOPE EDEN REPLIES

The readers of the Boston Evening American who are asking questions of Miss Hope Eden, mystic, who is appearing at the Columbia Theatre, will here find some of the answers today. Miss Eden makes the following replies:

Jennie H.—You have waited a long time for heart's desire, and it appears to me that you must wait longer. Am I right in saying you long for a home in the country?

Mrs. C. M.—Your mother's case has been in litigation for quite some time. I do not see any early settlement of it. It will be a matter of two or three years before she will receive any money. You ask if there is any fee. Absolutely none.

E. B.—I am very happy to inform you that you will pass your exams, so set your mind at rest on that score.

Anna B.—I would very strongly urge you to return home. Your surroundings will be much better there. Do this without delay.

W. J. D. H. B's interest is purely business. He enjoys your society merely as a very pleasant business associate.

Bob. Instead of doubting B's love for you, why not question yourself as to the sincerity of your love for her?

Anxious. You are going to have the opportunity to take the trip you are contemplating and I would advise it by all means. It will terminate in good results for you. Am I correct in saying that this trip would take you to New York?

Nina. You are suffering from an overdose of ego. You have heard that it is rather clever to be considered fickle. Get down to earth, or you will wake up to find yourself an old maid.

Herbert H. You have been an earnest worker all your life, and now you are about to reap the harvest of your efforts. Remember that the plodder gets there eventually and stays there.

M. T. B. You will go through your ordeal with flying colors. Pick a good name for "him" now.

Charlotte H. Standing still, as you are now, is bound to bring you more discontentment. The whole fault seems to lie in the fact, that you have no particular objective. I would by all means advise your taking up a medical course. In doing so you will find yourself too busy to become discontented. There is a whole lot in you Charlotte; now carry on.

$10 PRIZE FOR SALEM GIRL

The final chapter prize of $10 in the "Wives Adrift" letter contests goes to Nellie R. Friend of No. 175 Federal street, Salem, whose letter on the subject: "Was Charlotte foolish to reject Dave's offer?" was selected by the judges as the best.

This is the last chapter contest in connection with the absorbing Boston Evening American serial, but there still remains to be won the capital prize of $50 based on the entire serial and on the topic: "Does Charlotte Deserve Real Hapiness?" The $50 award will be announced within a few days. Watch for it.

Here is Nellie Friend's $10 prize-winning letter for the final week:

Was Charlotte foolish to reject Dave's offer?

Decidedly not. She was an innocent young bride out of a home of refinement and simplicity, plunged into the glare of city life with its many snares and pit falls. She was carried along by the eddying tide of popularity "indiscreet," perhaps, but "unfaithful" never. She met trouble and disgrace bravely to shield the one, who had cast her off. She should still carry on, until he wakes up to the fact that he and he alone, is to blame from the very beginning. Then only should she consent to return to his home, that he may try to reclaim the love that has always been his.

TRIP TO EUROPE FOR ERLICH

Twenty-Year Campaign Brings National Highways Victory

From Washington has come this news of historic importance to the Nation:

The Senate, following the lead of the House, has passed the Federal road aid bill appropriating $165,000,000 for use by the States for the two years ending June 30, 1929. There remains, therefore, only the signature of the President to complete one of the most valuable pieces of legislation that any Congress has ever produced.

As President Coolidge was consulted in the framing of this measure, and it had the benefit of his hearty endorsement through the various stages, there is naturally general confidence that he will deliver it to the American people as a law.

He could hardly perform a greater service. There is no outlay of government money more widely distributed or that meets more completely and usefully an everyday need of America's more than 110,000,000 inhabitants than national road building money.

That which Congress has appropriated will go into the construction of national highways, into the working out of a national highways program.

To reach this point in the progress of the country has been a long, hard fight, but was definitely started just twenty years ago when William Randolph Hearst, then a member of Congress, introduced the bill proposing the national highway development at last under way.

In the preamble to that measure these objects were set forth:

"To promote the construction of a national system of good roads, facilitate the extension of the postal service, and lessen the dependence of the agricultural and industrial interests of the country upon the railroads for transportation."

Government aid for counties and States buliding roads was provided, and $50,000,000 was appropriated out of the national treasury to give effect to the act.

Since that time, without interruption and with all the force and ability that could be mustered, the Hearst newspapers have been urging great national highways—splendid, well paved, enduring roads that would run from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Northern to the Southern boundary of the United States, serving the people of all sections.

There have been appropriations from time to time and for the expenditures the people have reaped enormous returns. But the bill which passed Congress last week, making more generous provision than any of its predecessors, really clinches victory for a real national highways program.

There is now in sight at least one transcontinental highway. The completion of that will prove to the people, in whatever section of the country they dwell, that a continuous, all-embracing, all-penetrating system of roads is one of America's greatest needs and best values.

We need these roads to show Americans America. Most of us don't know our own country—only a spot or fringe of it. In seeing it all we will all be better informed and therefore better Americans.

We need these roads for their military value. They will be invaluable in time of defense, for transport of men, arms and food.

We need them for their trade value. We need them for the recreation, enjoyment and education of the people. We need them for neighborliness so that we shall actually become ONE PEOPLE.

It is true that the bill will especially benefit the West for it is in the sparsely settled States that much of the money will be spent. But will it not be of inestimable value to the entire country? Unquestionably! All the people should be given the opportunity to know their country. And the only effective way in this day of practically universal ownership of automobiles is through building national highways.

The profits and the blessings that the people will reap from a complete system of good roads will more than justify the long years of difficult educational work of those who had the vision of their supreme necessity and never lost sight of the end to be achieved.

Bill Needs Right-of-Way

Foreign-Born American War Veterans Should Be Given Justice

Leaders in the Congress are to be commended for urging speedy passage of the Tilson-Wadsworth bill, authorizing the Shipping Board to bring back at cost those foreign-born American war veterans for whom the immigration gates have just been opened.

No fair-minded Senator, Representative or citizen objects to this bill. It simply protects Uncle Sam's escutcheon from the stain which would be caused if there were profiteering in the transportation of these heroes homeward.

About 10,000 young men of alien birth, but of American spirit, fought gallantly with Pershing in the Great War. When it ended, they chose to visit their natal countries before returning.

Then the immigration quotas were clamped down and they were debarred. That was their unfortunate status until the Hearst newspapers came to their rescue and championed a movement which led to the lifting of the bars.

But for many the regular costs of trans-Atlantic transportation would be embarrassing. Men good enough to fight, suffer and hazard for us are entitled to resume residence among us with purses unimpaired.

While all this is freely conceded in Washington, the Congress is nearing the close of a busy session, pressure for belated legislation is at its height and to put this measure of obvious justice for these deserving veterans through before adjournment will require special effort.

The country will expect every Congressman to help.

UNSEEN HEROISM SALT OF LIFE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

HEROISM is the salt that keeps humanity from rotting.

When we take an inventory of the qualities and passions of the crowd we are likely to find a discouraging state of things. They who despise the human race are not without their reasons.

What a welter of selfishness in the business world, what treacheries and cruelties, often what utter heartlessness and brute seizures!

In the relations between men and women what a world of sickening facts!

In family life what jars and pettiness, what frequent degradation of what should be the most beautiful and most ideal of human relationships!

In the history of religion what a shameful list of perversions; headstrongness, vanity, intolerance, persecution, superstition, and even wolfish passions!

But all these are salted and cured, altered and antidoted, by one thing—heroism.

Not the spectacular kind that makes the commons gape, but the unknown, unseen kind, done for itself alone, for the eye of God and the satisfaction of a noble self-respect.

Think of the unnoted and unnumbered acts of heroism on the part of mothers! These alone would save the world, as ten good men would have saved Sodom.

Look (and as you seek you shall find) at the numberless deeds of self-sacrifice among the poor, the self-renunciations of the rich, the helpfulness of fellow-workmen, the splendid courage of men and women that they often conceal with a sense of shame!

True, friend pessimist, humanity may be just mud, dirt, earth; but all through it sparkles the pure and priceless gold of heroism.

HOW DO YOU FEEL WHEN BIG BOSS IS AROUND?

When the boss and superintendent are talking earnestly do you always think that you are the subject of their conversation?

Does it make you uneasy and cause you to imagine many things which they might be saying about you?

Your imagination will not allow you to think it is a favorable comment.

And very probably they may not be considering you in any way.

You do not always meet requirements, hence you are rather sensitive.

But if you are doing what is right and performing your work well, why should you care what they say about you?

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

SOME WOMEN say they DANCE TO KEEP THEIR FIGURES;
How strange women are!
What are they keeping
Their figures FOR?
If they said they Danced TO KEEP THEIR HUSBANDS
From dancing with OTHER WOMEN
Who are trying to
FRAME-WORK,
Or KEEP IT up
To THE MARK,
It would be
UNDERSTANDABLE.
For A WOMAN to Dance with A MAN
In order TO REDUCE
Is as COMPLIMENTARY
As for A MAN to Dance with a girl
In order to
SQUEEZE her, and
SO THE WOMAN WHO WANTS TO KEEP HER FIGURE should KEEP it to HERSELF.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

G. R. C. wants me to write about jazz.

She likes jazz. It says something to her. It says something to her that the finest classical music manages to leave unsaid.

Between the lines of her letter you can see G. R. C. Careful, conscientious, G. R. C. in the dull, conventional framework of her Nice Lady Life. G. R. C., herself, doesn't think that framework dull. She really likes it. No other framework would suit her or her friends. She thoroughly enjoys the pleasant round of her days. She likes concerts, the painting exhibitions, the books and club meetings which form her amusements.

Yet, when once in a great while a reckless urge comes and she slips away to some gaudy, smoky "joint" to chew at splintered chicken and sip a tepid, garlic soup. And the lights are of a sudden dimmed and slowly the thick stale air begins to moan and away and wail—the smeared walls dissolve until there are walls no more, only a jungle, filled with muted calls and shadows like black hands that fumble for her heart.

IF YOU REALLY LIKE JAZZ HAVE IT.
ELSIE ROBINSON

Then all the carefulness of G. R. C. drops from her like a hair cloth shirt and she becomes a savage, glad again—a savage who slinks low with snuffing sounds — and mumbles moaning at some savage foe—and rocks and quivers with the throb of Jungle love—or gibbers in the madness of a jungle hate.

We All Need Art.

That's jazz. That's what jazz does to careful, cultured people like G. R. C., and G. R. C. LIKES it. But her friends DON'T. They say that G. R. C. should be ashamed of herself for liking jazz. They say jazz is crude, vulgar, idiotic, meaningless.

"But it isn't meaningless to me," cried G. R. C. "It has meanings I find in no other music. It releases emotions which no other music releases. Do you suppose I ought to deny this, Elsie? Ought I to pretend to like only classical music, as my friends do?"

No, I don't think you ought to pretend. I think all pretense is abominable, and that pretense about Art is the most wicked humbug of all.

We all NEED Art. And by Art I do not mean an appreciation of Wagner's operas or Zorn's etchings or Rodin's sculptures. I mean the expression of Beauty, whether it be done through music, or painting, the written word or the etched plate. But Beauty is a different thing to every one who views it. Roughly speaking, Beauty is whatever adds joy and power to your life. But the thing that will add joy and power to the life of Sarah Bernhardt will merely depress the gizzard of Molly Macguire.

"Then," says the Cultured Ones, "it's up to us to teach Molly What Real Beauty Is."

Nay, nay, dearies. It's up to Molly to find her beauty for herself. Beauty that she doesn't find for herself isn't worth a tinker's dam—to Molly—and if Molly finds something which seems beautiful to HER, then it's just as truly Art as the beauty of a Sarah Bernhardt.

Much Like Sheep.

That's the simple Truth, and yet it is a Truth which is largely overlooked in America. We consider ourselves the freest gang on earth, but when it comes to Art, our freedom makes sheep look like coyotes. We've got to run in flocks or we won't run at all. So there—Baa-a-a!

We all run to see the same play and read the same book and attend the same concert and admire the same interior decoration. It never occurs to us to strike out for ourselves and pick our own art.

"But maybe we'll pick something that's perfectly horrid."

Yes, maybe you will. In fact, if you're a regular, untutored mutt like most of us, the chances are 999 to 1,000 that you'll pick something perfectly horrid. BUT IF YOU LIKE IT, THAT'S THE THING FOR YOU. And it's only by picking something perfectly horrid, which you like, that you'll ever come to really like something which isn't perfectly horrid. For real beauty can only be found by sincere searching. You can't hire an interior decorator to do the sincere searching for you, or consult a book or buy it on a record. You must do that searching yourself, and make your own blunders. Only in that way will you cinch your victory.

So, G. R. C., if you find beauty and release in jazz, have your jazz. And don't let anyone scare you from it. For one squealing hour of jazz you really enjoy does more for human life than a season ticket for grand opera which means nothing to you.

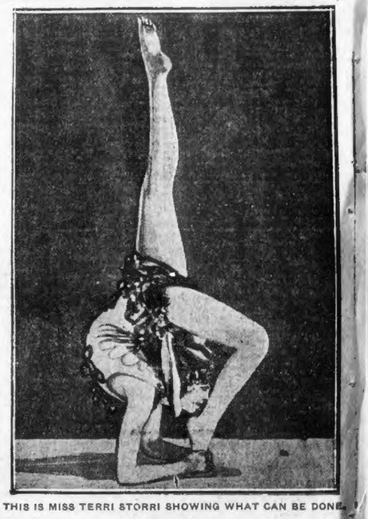
Poor Human Body

How We Illtreat That Machine "Fearfully and Wonderfully Made"



THIS IS MISS TERRI STORRI SHOWING WHAT CAN BE DONE.

This little girl who lives in London must make a living SOMEHOW, and this is how she DOES it. Her profession is that of an "acrobatic dancer," and the things she does to her poor little body are, as you see by this sample, quite unbelievable.

Everything in nature has a useful purpose, probably, from the rattlesnake to the flea. Many importance truths are hidden from us, but it is hard to understand what pleasure these contortions and twisting can give to those that pay to see the twisting.

It is "WONDERFUL" if you like. But it is brutal and cruel. Why should the interior anatomy of this young girl be twisted and torn in this fashion?

Why do human beings enjoy the torture of other human beings? Why was it possible for Cyrus of Persia to write with real satisfaction, after he had captured another king, "I cut off his nose and his lips and chained him at my door"?

Why will crowds gather to see a "human fly" risk his life climbing up the outside of a building? The climbing in itself is nothing. Anybody could do it. NEAR THE GROUND. The danger, the probability of a life being wasted is "the charm."

The answer is, that we are still barbarians, about as far from real civilization as is this charming young girl from the proper erect position of a well-behaved young lady.
